Venal Politicians at the Greeley Head-quarters—Men with a Grievance.

Matters were very dull yesterday at the Astor House Greeley head-quarters. Sad and sorrowful are the political mummies preserved therein. What private griefs have the ousted office-holders who frequent the head-quarters? Why sit they in concert, and take counsel together, how best they shall beat Grant and elect Greeley? Let us try to make answer:

First, there is George Van Cleft, who holds a Tammany Hall appointment as City Surveyor; he has been long willing to accept a lucrative office under Grant, but as he cannot get it he is using his small influence to elect Greeley, from whom he hopes better things. Then there is George Coachman, who, in addition to hating Grant, understands the art of division (of Tammany spoils) and silence (about silks.) He steps to the front with his influence, which, though like unto the widow's mite, is none the less acceptable to Honest Horace. Then there is the immaculate Christopher Pullman, who went before the Custom-House Investigating Committee in the character of an informer to give testimony about Custom-House employes carrying elections.

Has Christopher a grievance? Ah, yes. He was sent to have an accident at the Custom-house, who had held the office for twenty-two years, turned out to make room for his modest self. But the auditor was not removed.

John U. Andrews, of Virginia, who led the secers in 1863, feels competent to lead a Greeley battalion to Washington, and having been a Simultaneous rebel during the war, he naturally flies to the sheltering arms of Horace.

Another man with a grievance is Charles Grant. He was removed from the Custom-house, and was succored in his officeless extremity by the magnates of Tammany Hall, who gave him an unimportant position in the Police Department. He is now a great scribe at the Greeley Head-quarters, and, it is said, still holds his place under the City.

So one might go on to tell of the griefs of John Cochrane, "Gen." Palmer, and other fossilized politicians, whose services to the country are known only to themselves, and are therefore ignored by the grateful public, and whose voices in the councils of the Government are silent because nobody wants to hear them.

Tammany Roughs Going to Baltimore to Back Greeley.

Free tickets have been distributed this week by the Greeley organizers to those persons who are willing to attend the Baltimore gathering in the interest of the Tammany candidate. A large number of roughs and political hangers-on have expressed a desire to be "dead-headed" to the Convention, and it is probable that they will be accommodated by the Greeley Committee. Doubtless many of them, true to their old habits, will make the excursion a source of profit as well as pleasure. It is understood up-town that the notorious "Rocky" MOORE, ex-pugilist and ex-ram seller, will take a gang with him to the Monumental City.

The Anti-Greeley Convention at Baltimore.

We learn that the Anti-Greeley Democrats have secured for their National Convention the Maryland Institute, reported to be the finest hall in Baltimore. The present intention is to hold a private meeting for conference on Monday, and to organize their Convention on Tuesday, at noon.

Head-Quarters at the Astor House—Awful Solemnity at Room No. 14.

The term head-quarters pictures to the mind a scene of bustling activity, of tireless energy, a place full of the bustle of going and coming, where men sit writing from morning until night, where couriers laden with important dispatches arrive every half hour, where eager conversation is held by groups in corners and in the recesses of windows, where great events are forged with great and visible efforts. Such is the idea that one forms naturally of head-quarters, and such an idea is certainly correct. But there are exceptions, and it is possible that head-quarters should be in reality a very different place. To those misguided individuals who believe that Honest old Horace will carry New-York State the Times would recommend a peep at Greeley's head quarters in the Astor-house, any time during the day. Room No. 14 in the Astor House is next to the billiard room, and though this choice of a locality was objected to by some of the Committee, the Chairman bespoke the objections as frivolous, and declared the exceptions not well taken. Yet it has turned out that the proximity to the billiard saloon is a source of great annoyance. Room No. 14 is quite cool and well shaded, the very place for a comfortable doze if it were not for the clinking of the balls and the loud laughter of the players. The fine bearded theoretic looking man who writes the addresses on the documents which Mr. Greeley is sending through the country as fast as he can collect money to pay the postage, and who acts generally as Secretary, says that he is rather glad of it, because it keeps him from falling asleep. He comes to the room with the best intentions of sticking to the addresses which he has to write, but the heat gets the better of him and he often feels drowsy. But the visitors who take naps on the old-fashioned sofa opposite the door are greatly disturbed by the noise, and have frequently growled out their vexation that such a locality should have been chosen. It interferes with the delicious stillness of the place, which is impressed on the visitors from the minute they speak in whispers as they would as a funeral. Room No. 14 is one of those queer spots which seem to have been forgotten by the bustling world; a quiet quarter filled with a sleepy sense of its being always afternoon there; a room like a school-house during the holidays, in which all the boys have left; where obtrusive blue-bottle flies buzz about with annoying energy, where the mice run defiantly across the floor, and where cats sit blinking in conscious security. Sometimes acquaintances of the bearded one come and sit beside him at the vast pecan of round table where he is perched. They converse in low tones, but cheerfully, and occasionally burst in a cheery way, and then look round apologetically to see if any one has heard them and is offended. Occasionally a bluff Western man comes in, bringing with him an atmosphere of life and energy, and he startles them by his loud tones and his defiant way of bringing his big hand down upon the table. He annoys the bearded man, and perhaps scares him a trifle, for the acting Secretary is very gentlemanly in appearance and very gentle in manner, and shrinks from anything like boisterousness. He is generally relieved by another acting Secretary, who sits in the next room which is the Chairman's sanctum, and is separated from head-quarters only by folding doors. This confidential Secretary is much more off-hand, and, clapping the friend from the West on the shoulder, asks him if he won't take "suthin" to which an answer is generally made in the affirmative. Then the twain repair to the bar in the billiard-room, and "the Western gentleman" "suthin's" to strengthen his timidity. If he is a man of importance in his district, he is treated to a cigar, but not of the brand manufactured by Mr. Greeley and Mr. Tweed, because they were made by machinery, and would not draw at all. Cigars, however, are only offered to the really influential men, because the treasury at head quarters is low, advances having been declined by Mr. Tweed until the Baltimore nomination. In the Carpenter sits and chats a good deal, of mornings, with the Chairman, and tells him what he knows about Frank Blair's campaign. The acting Secretary read the correspondence which comes over from the Tribune office, while the Private Secretary chooses among the Southern exchanges from the same quarter what he thinks will suit the taste of ardent friends. Rude men come and stand in the door-way and stare as if they expected to find a learned pig secreted somewhere in the premises, but as nobody notices them, they pass on their way, and leave head-quarters to its wonted calm. It is a pleasant, quiet place and reminds one of a monastery. Men who are tired of public life and think of retiring into absolute seclusion like Zimmerman, cannot do better than to spend a day here in silent meditation.

Gen. Grant's Kindness to the Southerners in Brazil.

From the Indianapolis Journal, July 4.

In a speech delivered at Cleveland, Ohio, a few evenings since, Gen. R. C. Kirk, late Minister to the Argentine Republic, mentioned an act of kindness performed by President Grant toward certain ex-rebels, which is not generally known. After the war, a few hundred Southern men, feeling that they could not live under the United States Government, went to Brazil with their families. In a short time many of them became reduced to a condition of absolute starvation, and were eager to get back to the United States, but were unable to do so. In this emergency President Grant ordered, that all who wished to return should be transported on Government steamers, free of expense, and nearly all of them thus found their way back.

The "Reformers."

From the Chicago Evening Post.

The New-York Greeley supporters include shining stars of political purity. Vide:

Tweed,	Connolly,
Hall,	Hoffman,
Sweeny,	Barnard,
Garvey,	Watson.

A late accession is MATT BRENNAN. MATT is a reformer. He owned and ran a dirty dance-house; reformed by running for an office as a Democratic candidate. Naturally, with his antecedents, he was overwhelmingly elected. He became Sheriff. When the halter was prepared for TWEED and CONNOLLY, and SWEENY and HALL, MATT reformed again, and served the warrants when he could no longer find any possible excuse for not looking up the men. When it was obvious Tammany was dead, MATT reformed again, and showed a disposition to devote his unsullied influence on the side of the Reform Legislature which so rapidly slid into VANDERBILT'S pocket. Then MATT reformed again, and became a GREELEY man.

How Scandals are Manufactured.

Here is the interesting career of a joint slander, invented by the Liberal organs. The wanton and malignant character of the calumny is as last unwittingly confessed in the columns of one of its fathers:

THE REMOVAL OF COLLECTOR PALFREY.

From the Springfield Republican, June 12.

The ax has come down. Mr. CHARLES W. PALFREY is no longer Collector of the Port of Salem. His only offense was that, being the editor of a Republican paper in Gen. BUTLER'S district, he did not support that ambitious gentleman, last Fall, in his raid upon the Governorship. To be sure, he was a faithful and capable officer, and had a record as a Republican journalist which bore the marks of many years of service, and had incurred the hostility of Jeff. DAVIS in the Charleston Convention. But all this went for nothing. Gen. BUTLER demanded his head, and it was promptly forthcoming upon a Treasury Department charge. We ask Mr. GEORGE S. BOUTWELL in all kindness, whether he can afford this sort of thing much longer?

THE TRIBUNE ADDS A BLUNDER TO THE BLUNDER.

From the New-York Tribune, June 12.

The renominators, with the great renominated at their head, have begun to put on the screws after a fashion which it did not require any great gift of prophecy to anticipate. CHARLES W. PALFREY is a good enough Grant man, and as editor of the Salem Register he has given the Administration a fair support. But it is necessary in that district not only to support GRANT, but Gen. BUTLER; and as Mr. PALFREY couldn't do that with much even of simulation, he was cut down from the Age-long office of Postmaster. So the Administration thinks Gen. BUTLER worth propitiating, and when he orders a decapitation the Federal guillotine is at once put in motion. We don't condole with Mr. PALFREY, for, under the circumstances, he is better out of office than in.

ONCE MORE.

From the New-York Tribune, June 21.

Mr. PALFREY, Collector of the Port at Salem, was suddenly turned out of the office he filled with perfect acceptability, because Gen. BUTLER desired it.

THE SLANDER OVERHAULED AT LAST.

From the New-York Tribune, July 3.

An investigation of the charges against Mr. PALFREY, Collector of Customs at Salem, Mass., develops the fact that the Treasury Department has been for many months in possession of evidence impeaching his integrity and official capacity. It appears that this officer has been in the habit of manipulating seizures made within his district so to defraud the Government and benefit himself, and the only excuses offered by him have been that he could not understand the revenue laws, and that he had been advised by a Boston Custom-house officer to pursue the course he did. The records, however, show that although this Boston officer was at once removed, Mr. PALFREY has only recently been requested to resign. The recess of Congress, and consequent impossibility of getting a whitewashing Committee to report upon this case, will doubtless compel Mr. PALFREY'S removal, though for some reason Mr. BOUTWELL seems very unwilling to take this course. Various theories are advanced here regarding the retention of Mr. PALFREY after the exhibitment of his guilt, among others that Mr. PALFREY'S connection with a semi-weekly paper in Massachusetts is not without its influence upon Mr. BOUTWELL just at this time.

Advice of One of Greeley's North Carolina Friends to the Ku-Klux.

From the Raleigh (N. C.) Era, July 2.

At Louisburg, Gov. VANCE said "that he would sooner be the meanest Ku-Klux rotting in the Penitentiary, than to be one of the prosecutors or the Judge who tried them."

He further advised his Democratic friends that the best way to succeed in the coming election was by kicking out the Republicans and cause them to fear them. He was asked by a Republican bystander if he meant "politically." He said, "Not at all."

It is plain that he meant literally or personally, and we would say to this gentleman, who fled on a mule, proclaiming as he went, at the approach of SHERMAN and his army, that the day has passed when free citizens of North Carolina fear kicking out by either him or his Ku-Klux friends, for whose encouragement this bravado language was used.

Charles A. Dana's Opinion of Gen. Grant, Before he was Hoisted the Collectorship of New-York.

From Dana's Life of Gen. Grant.

It hardly admits of a question that his education was better adapted to fit him (Grant) for statesmanship than that afforded by most of the higher grades of colleges in this country. The Academy at West Point not only thoroughly tests and trains the intellectual faculties, but its routine of studies embraces law in its application to the ruling of States, the history of nations, political economy and the general science of civil government. He passed the severe ordeal of the Academy with great credit. . . . He had had a seven years' training in one of the greatest schools of modern times, wherein he has been constantly engaged in dealing with some of the most intricate concerns, political and military, ever intrusted to the care of a civilian or a soldier.

He is certainly entitled to a place in that class of public men of whom Franklin, Knox, Jackson, Taylor and Lincoln were illustrious types. . . . His enlightened counsels—the actual service he rendered in regard to civil, social, legal and financial matters of unprecedented character and transcendental importance, affecting the interests of large populations and the destinies of powerful States—prove that he possesses abilities and attainments that entitle him to a place among the wise and prudent statesmen of the country.

Again Dana Speaks—Not Having Yet Been Snubbed.

From the Sun, Friday, May 23, 1862.

Grant's name is doubtless a tower of strength to the Republicans, for he has a firm and abiding hold upon the confidence of the people, irrespective of parties. From the hour when, amid the thickest gloom of the war, the victory of Donelson revived the drooping spirits of those who were struggling to preserve the Union, he has had a lodgment in the popular heart from which neither calumny, nor clamor, nor prejudice, nor faction has been able to drive him. Though calculating political leaders may have wrested their faces from him, the unselfish sentiment of the nation has never ceased to regard him as the soldier to whose genius, skill and firmness are due in large measure the salvation of the Republic. Since the close of the war his conduct in the discharge of difficult and delicate trusts has convinced reflecting minds that he is a wise and prudent statesman, as well as a skillful and victorious soldier. He is conservative in his policy, and, while checked and almost indicrate powers over a conquered and prostrate section of the country, so exercising his authority that we witness not yet the awful pressure of his hand. Throughout this turbulent and trying period he has been scrupulously observant of the laws, never seeking to overstep their requirements; but always striving to fulfil their mandatory in the spirit of an urbane and considerate Magistrate.

In the midst of wide-spread venality and corruption, no man has ever doubted his honesty. Millions of the public money. His administration as General-in-Chief of the Army, and as Secretary of War ad interim, is not only marked with eminent ability, but distinguished for retrenchment and economy. The Pendleton and other reforms in the Revenue and Navy, and the Treasury, and the Interior Departments, and the Post Office Department, and the saving of millions to the Treasury.

Gen. Grant is not a politician. But a patriot, ever since the downfall of the rebellion he has been anxious for the earliest possible restoration of the insurgent States to their former relations to the Union. He has deprecated the quarrel between the Executive and Legislative departments of the Government, which have tended to retard this work, while on his part he has labored assiduously to bring it to a successful and harmonious close. In this he has exhibited the sterling qualities of a wise and liberal statesman. He would be selected to the Presidency, all impartial and unprejudiced men, whether radicals or conservatives, and whether dwelling at the North or the South, would feel that the Union and the Constitution were safe in his hands.

A Little Illustration.

From the Milwaukee Wisconsin, July 3.

It is said that HORACE GREELEY, in a conversation with a friend recently, remarked "that he was much surprised to think the defection in the Republican ranks was no greater than it appeared to be at the present time." Like the man who fell off the top of the stage-coach, if HORACE had only known how the stage hadn't tipped over, he'd never a got off.

The Spoils Palmer Did Not Get.

From the Chicago Journal, July 2.

Gov. Palmer, who turned traitor to the party that elected him, in the foolish hope of being nominated for President at Cincinnati, and who vainly expected to be renominated for Governor by the Springfield Dolly Vardens, is now, it is understood, figuring to "fix up" the next Legislature so as to secure the United States Senatorship in Trumbull's place, for which he stands about as good a chance as he does of becoming King of the Cannibal Islands. Poor Palmer! Poor Trumbull! The former is the victim of that sort of ambition which "o'erleaps itself," and the latter is the victim of chronic political bilious-ness.

The Crowd Which Surrounds Him.

From the Watertown Times, July 3.

Tweed, Sweeny, Mayor Hall, Ben. Wood, Mudgett and John Cochrane are foremost in their advocacy of the Cincinnati ticket. It is significant of their expectations. Mr. Greeley is surrounded by men whom the honest voters distrust, and for good reasons. The cry of reform from such a crowd ought not to mislead the people. There is no other organization so full of the of the corruptionists of New-York City than that they prefer Mr. Greeley to Gen. Grant because they think they can use him to better advantage. They are a class of men that are not apt to make mistakes of this kind. They live by this business and they study their subjects well. Voting for their man in the hope that, after all, he will prove true to honest men's purposes, is a visionary dream.

Official Vote of Oregon—Republican Gain, 1,162.

The complete official vote of Oregon at the late election for Congressman is as follows: Republican, 13,168; Democratic, 12,017; Republican majority, 846. Two years ago the Democrats had a majority of 335; Republican gain, 1,181. In the State Senate the Republicans will have two majority, and in the House of Representatives fifteen majority, thus securing the election of a Republican United States Senator in place of Hon. Henry W. Corbett, Republican, whose term expires in 1873.

A Hint from Michigan.

An Orangeville correspondent of the Hastings (Mich.) Banner says: "Greeley has no supporters in the Republican Party of our township, and the Democrats say they will be excused as they prefer to vote for Grant if they must vote for a Republican at all."

POLITICAL NOTES.

The Democratic John A. Griswold is anti-Greeley.

Several Democratic papers in Oregon have declared against Greeley.

The South Carolina Republican State Nominating Convention is to be held in Columbia, Wednesday, Aug. 21.

The Savannah (Ga.) News still clings to Gen. W. S. Hancock as a Democrat who could be elected President.

The Republicans of California will hold a State Convention in Sacramento, Thursday, Aug. 1, to nominate electors.

Col. S. M. Taliaferro, of Stafford County, Virginia, a life-long Democrat, declares in a letter in favor of the election of Grant and Wilson.

The Portland Press says that every sane man who knows anything about Maine knows that it will give Grant and Wilson a majority of thousands.

Among Democratic aspirants for Congress in the Eighth District of Tennessee are W. W. Vaughn, Gen. T. J. Bell, R. P. Caldwell and Gen. A. W. Campbell.

United States Senator Cole was most enthusiastically welcomed on his return to San Francisco, his friends of both political parties joining in the serenade tendered him.

The Columbia Union appeals to the Republicans of South Carolina to secure first a good Legislature, as of even more importance than the election of honest executive officers.

Alex. H. Stephens insists that the Georgia Democracy should feel no more bound by the action of the Baltimore Convention if it indorses Greeley than it would if it adopted the Grant platform.

Alex. H. Stephens republishes Judge Linton Stephens' long and bitter attack on Greeley, and says that the demand for it is very great. One order came from Western New-York for 1,000 copies.

It is asserted that since the close of the rebellion not less than 23,000 persons, black and white, have been scourged, banished or murdered by the Ku-Klux Klans of the South. There were no Democrats among them.

The Republicans of the First District of Wisconsin have nominated their strongest man for congress, and the Democrats are at their wits' end to find some body, Democrat or somehead, who will stand some chance to defeat him.

Hon. A. G. Talbot, Democratic candidate for the nomination for Congress in the Eighth Kentucky District, has bolted the primary election, and declared himself an independent candidate. The regular Democratic nominee will probably be M. J. Durham.

The Buffalo Post, a Democratic journal, says, pointedly: "We are not of those who desire to throw the least obstacle in the way of political reform; but we may see 2,000,000 of sterling Democrats taxed to look upon a great feast, and not allowed to partake of it?" The Post wants at least one good Democrat on the ticket nominated at Baltimore.

Glowing accounts have been published of the organization of a Greeley club at the village of Aurora, last Saturday evening, but one of the gentlemen appointed as the officers of the meeting, says no meeting was held, and no club formed; that there were no "illuminations," no "band," no discoursing of "patriotic airs," no "addresses," and no anything.

"Bowie-knife" Potter, of Wisconsin, has no idea of supporting Greeley. On the contrary, the Milwaukee Sentinel says he is as sturdy a Republican today as he was when he stood upon the floor of the House of Representatives a dozen years ago to defy Southern bullies, like Roger A. Pryor, and vindicate free speech and the courage of Northern men at the same time.

The Oakland Transcript inquires if Duke Gwin has ever been naturalized. It labors under the impression that in Mexico, when made a "Duke," he renounced all allegiance to the Government of the United States, and now that he has been sent by the Californian Democrats as a delegate to Baltimore, it is anxious to have this matter cleared up.

The letter which the Greeley organs are publishing purporting to have been written by Congressman Wilson, of Indiana, to Major Pepp, and telling him that he had secured for him the appointment of Mail Agent for Indiana, and that it would afford him a fine opportunity to operate during his pleasant excursion in the management of one Simultaneous ticket, is a forgery.

THE BALTIMORE CONVENTION.

Tammany the Main Stay, as in Former Years.

Preparing for the Great "Shut Your Eyes and Open Your Mouth" Dance—The Press Accommodations Curtailed from the Tribune Office.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BALTIMORE, July 5.—This Monumental City has its usual Midsummer somnolent appearance. The streets are pleasantly devoid of crowds, the hotels delightfully quiet, and I have had the great satisfaction of not having heard Grant or Greeley mentioned since my arrival this afternoon. From all this it may be inferred that the politicians have not arrived, and such is the fact. At the Carrollton there are not more than a dozen, chiefly from the South; at Barnum's half as many, and one lorn individual hailing from Georgia at the St. Clair. Coming down on the train I thought I caught a glimpse of Hon. S. S. Cox in the crowd of famished passengers rushing after that execrable lunch at Wilmington, but if it were he, he has managed since he got here to hide himself completely, as I have not found him registered at any hotel. But if there be no Democrats of note here just yet, there will be plenty within a day or two. The trouble is that nobody likes to come first lest he should meet some other lonely early bird to whom he must say, "Greeley's our man." Very few of them have the heart to do that sort of thing except in a crowd. So they are waiting for the crowd, when they can shout for Greeley altogether, and thus keep each other in countenance. Tammany is depended on to furnish the cheek and bounce of the affair, so that some exceedingly well-known New-Yorkers will probably be among the first to put in an appearance, and begin that clatter of tongues in hotel public rooms which is a necessary prelude to all National Conventions. A good, strong working force of those who for several years relieved the people of the trouble of governing New-York is to be here, some to-morrow, others on Sunday, but not until Monday morning will they be very numerous. In order that no partiality shall be shown, they shall be named in the order of arrival, so that the people may see who is back of Mr. Greeley.

BUNGLING ARRANGEMENTS.

Arrangements for the Convention have not yet been far advanced by the Resident Committee, and although the Opera-house may look quite handsome, it will not compare with the grand scene presented at Philadelphia. In some respects the management has been bad, and promises to result in difficulties. This will probably be the case with the arrangements for the Press, which were first in the hands of the Resident Committee, were then taken by the National Executive Committee, and are now handed over to the owner of the Opera-house, who, it is announced, will on Monday neon assign seats to the representatives of the Press having proper credentials. It is not likely that this arbitrary proceeding, if it should prove to be such, will give satisfaction, as there are symptoms already of growling. There may be no intention of favoritism, but it is at least extremely likely that this multiplicity of cooks will cause trouble.

THE GREAT DISLOCATION ACT.

When so few of the delegates have arrived, it is of course impossible to glean any political news of importance. It may be said, however, that there is a general impression, both among these delegates and the resident Democrats, that the whole Cincinnati pill, Greeley, Brown and platform, is to be swallowed without a grimace or a protest. The thing, however, is to be done as decently as possible, and Greeley is to be indorsed by a formal ballot on a call of the States, when he is to get every vote, and be rapturously hailed as the chosen of the Democracy which ran Seymour in 1868, and declared the war a failure in 1864. Brown is to be served in the same fashion, and the Democratic Party having cut its throat in this way, the Cincinnati platform is to be plastered over the wound, in the hope of saving the rash old creature's life. There is to be plenty of enthusiasm—ample arrangement to that end having been perfected in New-York—and the Democratic "Topsey" is going to be exceedingly jolly under the most heart-rending circumstances.

THE NEW DEMOCRATIC ORGAN.

The Tribune is to be the great light of the occasion, as an incident will show. Ford, the Opera-house man, insisted on stocking the Associated Press into the orchestra hole; and when Mr. Fox insisted upon places on the platform, Ford answered that it was impossible, as he had received letters from Mr. Whitelaw Reid asking for that space, and he must have it. To the same end I hear an old Democrat, who boasted he had never voted anything but the straight ticket in his life, say tonight that the World was not Democratic enough for him, and he was taking the Tribune now. These are small things perhaps, but they are straws. There will be many more like them within the next three days, and the meaning of all, taken together, is that the Democratic elephant is about to swallow the little wisp of hay labeled "Liberal Republican." E. C.

The German Vote.

The four States in which the German vote will exercise a great influence are Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. The total German vote of these States has been estimated as 194,[illegible] divided as follows:

Pennsylvania	82,000
Ohio	36,275
Indiana	15,411
Illinois	40,769
Total	174,[illegible]

The Irish Vote.

The States in which the Irish vote will exert a strong influence are California, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, New-Hampshire, New-Jersey, New-York, Ohio, and Pennsylvania. The total estimated Irish vote of these States is 811,[illegible], divided as follows:

California	9,000	New-Jersey	14,[illegible]
Connecticut	11,278	New-York	86,[illegible]
Illinois	26,[illegible]	Ohio	13,102
Indiana	4,449	Pennsylvania	120,[illegible]
Missouri	9,[illegible]
New-Hampshire	2,[illegible]	Total	811,[illegible]

A Ten Hour "Demonstration" from Williamsport Visits Lock Haven, Penn.

LOCK HAVEN, Penn., July 5.—About 150 ten-hour men, headed by their President, arrived here from Williamsport on the morning train, and with martial music marched in an orderly manner past the saw-mills. They stated their purpose to be the formation of a Ten-hour League. This evening they held a mass-meeting in the depot, and returned on the night train.

The Mayor ordered all drinking-saloons closed, and no other disorderly measures. None of the mills here are on strike.

Annual Meeting of the Army of the Tennessee.

MADISON, Wis., July 5.—A meeting of the Army of Tennessee was held here yesterday afternoon. Gen. W. T. Sherman was re-elected President, and Col. Dayton, Recording Secretary; Gen. Hickenlooper, Corresponding Secretary, and Gen. Force, Treasurer. Gen. John A. Logan was elected Orator, Toledo, Ohio, was selected delegate to meet in Louisville the 17th and 18th of October, 1873. Miss Ella Wheeler, the poetess, was presented with a handsome badge of the Society. The banquet at the Park Hotel was of the most sumptuous character, and was greatly enjoyed by the officers and their ladies.

THE FOURTH ABROAD.

Banquet in Geneva, to the American Representatives—Remarks of Mr. Adams—Celebrations by Americans in all Parts of Europe.

GENEVA, July 5.—The American anniversary was handsomely celebrated here yesterday. The city was early decorated. In the evening a banquet was given to the American representatives and visitors. Mr. Adams responding to a toast, expressed his gratification at the work recently terminated, by which the fact of arbitration was established. He said the tendency of this result would be to reverse the traditional policy of nations as to the mode of settling their differences.

LONDON, July 5.—The Fourth of July was more generally observed by Americans in Europe this year than ever before. There were special celebrations in this city, and in Edinburgh, Manchester, Liverpool, Paris, Stuttgart, Geneva, and other cities.

Americans in Paris Give a Banquet at the Grand Hotel—Friendly Toasts and Speeches by Americans and Frenchmen.

PARIS, July 5.—A banquet was given by the Americans on the evening of the 4th of July, in the elegant saloon of the Grand Hotel. Sixty persons were present. Hon. Elliot C. Cowdin was chairman. Among the guests were Gen. James L. Donaldson, United States Army; J. Meredith Read, Consul-General of the United States at Paris; Col. Evelyn Washburne, son of the American Minister; Mr. Healy; M. Laboulaye, the well-known friend of America, and several eminent French journalists.

The Chairman, on offering the toast to the health of the President of the United States, made an eloquent speech. Recalling the early history of America, he took occasion to pay a warm tribute of praise and gratitude to France, who was the first, and had since been the constant, friend of American independence. He referred to the creation of the Tribunal of Geneva as one of the noblest victories of civilization, and saw in it an exemplification of Richelieu's maxim that differences between nations could be settled without resort to the sword.

A toast to President Thiers and the French Republic elicited great enthusiasm, and, amid the cheers of the company, M. Laboulaye rose to respond to it. He returned thanks for the honor done his country, and acknowledged that the sympathy of the American people for the French in their reverses had been gratifying. He closed his remarks by proposing the following sentiment: "France and the United States—one ashes, always friends." Consul-General Read made a graceful and appropriate response. Colonel Washburne replied to the toast to the health of the American Minister, who was absent, and Gen. Donaldson spoke for the Army and Navy of the United States. Toasts to the memory of Washington and Lafayette followed, and the utmost cordiality prevailed, the Frenchmen vied with the Americans in protestations of friendship, and, amid great good feeling, the company separated at midnight with cheers for the French and American Republics.

Dinner of the American Club in Liverpool—Banquet in the Inns of Court Hotel, London—Comments by the London Telegraph.

LIVERPOOL, July 5.—The American Club of this city celebrated the anniversary of the Declaration of Independence by a dinner at their rooms in the Washington Hotel. The house was gayly decorated with bunting inside and out. Dr. Jerome V. C. Smith, Ex-Mayor of Boston, occupied the chair. Complimentary and friendly toasts were exchanged by the American and English guests, and speeches full of good-will were made on both sides.

LONDON, July 5.—The American residents here had a banquet at the Inns of Court Hotel, last evening, in honor of their national anniversary. Judge Haldeman presided.

The day was also celebrated in Edinburgh, Manchester, and other cities of the Kingdom.

The Daily Telegraph this morning says: "These celebrations of American Independence, which we once sorely begrudged, but of which we are now honestly proud, had a peculiar character yesterday, following so closely the settlement of the dispute over the indirect claims. We think the glorious Fourth is more honored as the anniversary of Vicksburg and Gettysburg. We have certainly forgotten whether the Chesapeake beat the Shannon, or vice versa."

THE FISK MURDER.

The Theories of Self-Defense and Insanity.

Evidence to Show that Stokes' Life was Threatened—His Persecution by Fisk—The Rencontre Accidental.

The trial of Edward S. Stokes for the murder of James Fisk, Jr., was resumed before Judge Ingraham, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, yesterday. Several witnesses were examined for the defense, but none of those on whose testimony it depends for an acquittal of the prisoner have yet been placed upon the stand. The prosecution was conducted by District-Attorney Garvin, assisted by Messrs. Beach and Fullerton, and the prisoner was represented by Messrs. Tremaine, McKeon, Dailey and Townsend. The following is a full report of yesterday's proceeding:

At the commencement of the proceedings yesterday, the depositions of Thomas Hart and John Redmond, taken before the Coroner's Jury, and which have been already published, were read for the purpose of contradicting their testimony given on the actual trial.

TESTIMONY OF CORONER YOUNG.

Nelson W. Young, Coroner, testified in reply to Mr. McKeon: I held the inquest on the body of Col. Fisk; the questions put by the counsel for the prisoner were in writing, but questions put by jurymen were verbal; the evidence was taken by a stenographer to have it thoroughly correct; the evidence was signed by the different witnesses without their objecting to.

Q.—Did you see Messrs. Fullerton and Beach there? Objected to.

Witness—I remember asking written questions; they came from gentlemen; I had great difficulty; God was first called to Messrs. Beach and Fullerton by your objecting to questions put by them; I have not written the testimony taken there, and can't say whether it is correct or not; it took the statement of Lawrence Carr, the hackman, who I understand has since died.

JUSTICE BIXBY'S TESTIMONY.

Butler H. Bixby, examined by Mr. McKeon—I am a Police Justice, presiding at Yorkville Police Court; there was a complaint made before me by a person named Mansfield against Fisk; and examinations took place several times before me in the last year; the complaint was made in November; all the several examinations extended to the death of Fisk; the complaint was against Fisk and others; in that case; there was a hearing before me on the 4th of January; Miss Mansfield and Miss Williams were in attendance; Stokes was examined as a witness in the case; I recollect the circumstance of two o'clock; Mr. Beach was present as counsel for Fisk; the complaint was made by Josephine B. Mansfield against Fisk for libel; there was an affidavit made by Miss Williams; a warrant was given; a man named King; Fisk was present at one hearing, but by consent he was permitted to leave; the first day's examination was held on the 15th November.

Q.—Do you remember the exact date, the time at which all these parties left the Court-room on the afternoon of the 5th of January? A.—It was about half-past one or two o'clock; I remember the time Mrs. Mansfield, Col. Fisk and Miss Williams and Stokes drove away; I did not see them enter the carriage, because I was in another part of the building at the time.

Q.—When this complaint was made by Mansfield, was Stokes present? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Were any directions given with regard to the arrest of Fisk? Objected to.

Mr. McKEON—We want to show that so far from entertaining malice or spite toward Fisk, Stokes did not desire to have Fisk taken away from his business, and so expressed himself.

The question was excluded by the Court.

TESTIMONY OF FRANCIS M. BIXBY.

Francis M. Bixby testified in reply to Mr. Tremaine—I recollect seeing Stokes on the afternoon of the 5th of January; I saw him also that forenoon at the Yorkville Police Court; he called upon me at my office, No. 4 Warren-street.

Q.—State what purpose he called upon you for. Objected to by the District-Attorney.

Mr. McKEON—We want to show that the last man who saw the prisoner before he stepped into the carriage, and he meant to prove by him that when Stokes came down-town he went into the office of Mr. Bixby to obtain information in relation to proceedings against Stokes by the Grand Jury.

The Court permitted the question and the witness answered: He asked me if I had heard anything in regard to his being indicted by the Grand Jury on the complaint of Fisk; I told him I heard the matter was before the Grand Jury, but that it was dismissed.

Q.—Did he say what he was going to do? Objected to.

Mr. Tremaine said the theory of the prosecution was this: That Stokes started on a mission of death; that he drove past the opera-house for the purpose of seeking Fisk; that he then proceeded to the Grand Central Hotel, and there waited for a long time about in the hall in search of his victim he is filled with a malicious intent. On the other hand, it was sought to be proven that this meeting was altogether accidental. He was engaged in a different purpose. He had different interests, and the point we noted was this, that when the defense was to be excluded from showing the declarations made by the prisoner at the different places he visited in passage from the Park down to the time of the shooting. Was there any rule of justice or propriety in not permitting him to put in evidence these natural declarations, which formed a complete chain of evidence? Stokes, he asserted, went to the Grand Central Hotel; he frequented that place; and he submitted that his declarations immediately prior to the shooting were admissible. He had no more intention of meeting Fisk than he had of meeting the friend, and of the truth of this they would satisfy the jury.

Mr. Garvin called attention to the case of the People vs. Beal, where the same point was raised, but it was overruled by the Court of Appeals, on the principle that a party shall not have the power to manufacture a defense for himself when he was preparing to take the initiatory steps in the commission of the great crime which we allege in this case. He could plot the death of his victim, he could carry out the intended murder of thought, and he goes on with the preparation for a great crime. The whole tenor of the evidence showed he was waiting for Fisk. He pursued him the whole day, and finally came to the Grand Central Hotel, and if this principle now asserted was to be carried out, everybody even while contemplating murder could form a complete and perfect defense.

Mr. Tremaine expressed his astonishment that the discussion on an interlocutory question should have given the District-Attorney an opportunity to say that the interests of justice should require him to enter upon an argument upon the ex parte, distorted and perverted statement which he has put in on the part of the prosecution. The District-Attorney attempted to prove that Stokes went to this hotel for the purpose of assassinating Fisk, and when we produce evidence to show that such purpose was not entertained by his own declarations, he was met by this objection. With two of the ablest counsel in the State to assist and aid and advise, the District-Attorney sought to continue the policy to keep the prisoner's mouth sealed, and all this as the result of the testimony of that little, perjured Thomas Hart, who was brought into this Court by an unseen and unknown power. There are some persons behind the throne which they were determined to unmask, and in this view they protested against the objection of the District-Attorney, which would practically shut the mouth of the prisoner and deprive him of his just rights.

Mr. Garvin remarked that the counsel for the other side attached much importance to the fact that private counsel were associated with him for the prosecution. In the great trial of Cole vs. Albany Mr. Tremaine was private counsel and not only prosecuted once but twice.

Mr. TREMAINE—I appeared on the direct employment of the Attorney-General. I was never private counsel for a criminal case.

Mr. GARVIN—What is the difference between getting it out of the State and out of a private individual? Money blood-money from the State was just as good gold as money from a private individual. His associates were as honorable as any in the profession, and it would not change them if they were appointed by the Attorney-General. His associate commenced this morning he prosecuted with Col. Fellows.

Mr. McKEON—I meant to say I was never private prosecutor in a murder case.

Mr. GARVIN (warmly)—The gentleman appeared in the case of Cancini, and he now howls and growls and starts, when his own pocket is filled with blood-money.

Mr. McKEON—I was employed by the State.

Mr. Garvin continued to say that did not affect the merits of the case, and having adverted to the question of the admission in evidence of the declarations of the prisoner, he maintained they should be excluded.

Judge INGRAHAM—It is right to give these declarations in connection with the res gesta, but this is not a declaration made in connection with the res gesta. It is a declaration made previously, and one of those declarations which in my judgment cannot be given at this time. As regards the private counsel, I desire that no further reference should be made to them during the trial.

Mr. Tremaine asked the witness if, during the conversation he had with Mr. Stokes in the afternoon of the 5th of January, he said anything, and if so, what, in relation to his intention to go to Providence on Tuesday, as a reason given for making the inquiry in regard to the indictment? Objected to and excluded.

TESTIMONY OF RUFUS F. ANDREWS.

Rufus F. Andrews was called to the stand after Mr. Bixby, and testified in relation to an interview which took place between himself and Stokes on the 5th of January, in the former's office, at a quarter to three. Mr. McKeon said he proposed to show by the witness that the prisoner (Stokes) came to make inquiries in relation to the indictment.

The first question as to Stokes' inquiry about the indictment was objected to, but allowed by the Court. The witness said: He asked me if I knew whether an indictment had been found against him by the Grand Jury of the Over and Terminer; I told him that so far as I had been able to ascertain there had not; he then asked me whether, if the indictment was obtained, he could be ——. Objected to on the ground that it was another question, but allowed, and the witness repeated:

He then asked me whether if an indictment was obtained he could be brought from Rhode Island by a requisition; I told him ——

Judge INGRAHAM—There, stop.

Q.—What further did you say to him? A.—I simply held him ——. Objected to by the District-Attorney.

Mr. McKEON—Now, Sir, I intend to hold the District-Attorney to his official responsibility. We are trying a man for his life, and everything connected with his life ought to be developed. I want to know if it is in obedience to his duty to the power behind him that he excludes me from putting the question. (Excitedly.) I hold you and the men whose servant you are responsible for this responsibility.

Judge INGRAHAM—I have endeavored repeatedly, Mr. McKeon, to stop this. I have insisted on it on the part of the District-Attorney, and I insist on it on your side. Such remarks must not be made to the prosecution.

Mr. McKEON—Recollect, Sir, we are defending a man for his life.

Judge INGRAHAM—That is no reason at all.

Mr. McKEON—I want to say that the District-Attorney holds in his hands life and death.

Judge INGRAHAM—Neither the counsel nor the Court are to pander to the District-Attorney the course he should pursue.

Mr. McKEON—There is a responsibility higher yet.

Mr. McKeon then asked the questions. What was the further answer? Did you advise him that he could have seen? Did he say he was indicted? Did he say he was going to Providence for the purpose of attending a trial in relation to a debt, on the Tuesday following? All of which were excluded by the Court and exceptions taken.

TESTIMONY OF GEO. W. COTTERILL.

Geo. W. Cotterill, the next witness examined, spoke to having met Stokes at the Hoffman House on the 4th of January last, at fifteen or twenty minutes three P. M.; he saw Stokes pass to the elevator and take up a blank dispatch, and there he left him; Stokes asked him some question in reference to the Long Branch boat. The question itself was excluded by Judge Ingraham. A question was also put to him by stokes in relation to Eatontown; he told Mr. Stokes it was Eatontown, and not Eatonville, there being no station at Eatonville.

Q.—Did you answer him at what time the boat left for Long Branch that afternoon? A.—No, Sir; a person in the office answered it.

Q.—Do you recollect his asking you how he could reach Eatontown? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you tell him he could leave ——? Objected to.

Q.—Did you not hear him say that he would have no time to go by boat that afternoon; he had to go to another place for business? [Excluded.]

Q.—Do you know the fact that Eatontown, near there is a race-course? [Objected to as immaterial.]

Mr. McKEON—I want to show that it was there he expected to find the man he came to buy.

Ruled out by the Court.

GEO. W. ROBERTS' TESTIMONY.

Geo. W. Roberts, clerk in the Western Union Telegraph office, No. 145 Broadway, produced, by order of the Court, the telegrams passing through the office on the 9th of January last. One was from the office in Eatontown, N. J., to the New-York office, another was from the Hoffman House to Eatontown, N. J., and the third was a "relay copy" of message sent from the Hoffman House to No. 145 Broadway, and "delivered" at Eatontown, N. J. The contents of the telegrams were, upon the objection of the District-Attorney that they were immaterial and irrelevant, excluded. Mr. McKeon said he simply wanted to show that Stokes had left the place of his death. Judge Ingraham refused to allow them to be read, as also the name of the person to whom they were addressed.

The Court then took a recess.

AFTER THE RECESS.

After the recess, the evidence of Lawrence Carr, a witness before the Coroner's inquest, was read.

Samuel McLoughlin testified—I was at the Hoffman House on the 6th of January last, between three and four o'clock; I saw Stokes there; I had been assisting him in this case in the Court of Appeals, and had some of the evidence for him; I procured it free; Mr. Doty, who lived down at Eatonville, gave it; I gave Mr. Schaub's evidence but not that of Doty; I gave him Schaub's, Sommerdyke's and Jerome's names as witnesses.

The District-Attorney objected.

Mr. TREMAINE—I want to show that he told him he would find those persons who knew of this but near the corner of Broadway, and that he followed it up by going there. You don't object to that?

The COURT—You told him where to find those persons?

WITNESS—Yes, at the corner of Amity-street and Broadway.

Q.—Yet any you had been in pursuit of these witnesses? A.—Yes, I had; I ——. Yes; I understand Stokes had a room at the Hoffman House; when I went to the Hoffman House I saw him standing by the office—near the telegraph office; he was standing in that place when he would naturally be if he was about to send off a telegraphic dispatch; he came up and told me he had telegraphed to Mr. Doty. [Objected to.] I saw him leave the house; he went out into Twenty-fourth-street, through the lane-room.

Q.—Did he say to you where he was going? A.—He said he was going to ——

Judge INGRAHAM—Stop, stop.

Q.—But he said he was going down to Twenty-third-street? Objected to. Exception taken.

Q.—How long have you known Stokes? A.—Eight or ten years.

Mr. TREMAINE—Did you ever hear him say anything in relation to Fisk killing him? We offer that, Your Honor, under this issue of insanity.

The COURT—(to District-Attorney)—What have you to say to that?

DISTRICT-ATTORNEY—We object. They have not fixed time or place.

THE COURT—There must be a limit.

Witness—It was three or three or four weeks before this happened. (the shooting.)

THE DISTRICT-ATTORNEY—They must offer a good deal more than that to show insanity; a man might manufacture testimony in this way three or four weeks before his life, and then walk up to a man and shoot him; that won't do.

Mr. TREMAINE—On the issue of insanity, it I understand the rule, we have a right to show whatever was said by the prisoner before, at the time, and even after the homicide. Now we propose to show that this prisoner declared that he knew he was pursued by a band of villains, and he was resolved to strike first.

The COURT—I think there is no foundation yet for the issue of insanity.

Q.—Do you know the fact that men were in pursuit of him? Objected to.

Mr. TREMAINE—I offer to show that the deceased drew a pistol upon the prisoner at the hotel; I offer to show that the prisoner considered his life in danger, and that the fact of his being pursued by ruffians, by blackmailers, by persons who was known to the prisoner as well as to others.

The COURT—You have, no doubt, a right to prove your two first propositions.

The District-Attorney objected to any evidence being given in regard to the character of the deceased. To state that a person was rash, savage, quarrelsome, would not justify a private citizen in taking upon himself the prerogative of the Government in the punishment of crime. However bad or desperate a man's character may be, he forfeits no right to life until by actual attempt or demonstration at the time of killing he induces a reasonable belief on the part of the slayer that he intends to kill him or do him some bodily harm. That is the rule in this State; that is the rule by which we must be governed in this case. The fact that there were threats is no defense. They must begin by showing actual danger.

Mr. TREMAINE—The State declares the taking of human life is justifiable when there was reason to suppose, on the part of the person so taking it, that he was in danger of the infliction of great personal harm. The question then is, what are the grounds upon which the prisoner acted? Was he actuated with the idea of self-defence; or was he actuated from depravity? We have a right to show the apparent—the dangerous character of Fisk, as a vindictive, dangerous man; we may show that that was known to the prisoner; we may also show that threats of his had been communicated to the prisoner; we may show that the threats were followed by ruffianly men; we may show that the prisoner was aware that Fisk in his character of a vindictive man had exercised vengeance against those who came in his way; we may show that the prisoner knew of this. The counsel then cited a number of authorities in support of the views he had brought forward.

The Court agreed that it would be proper to admit any testimony calculated to show the motives under which the prisoner acted.

The following questions were offered by the defense, and excluded by the Court: Did the prisoner say to you that he had made up his mind after that Fisk intended to kill him? Did he say that he had knocked Eaton on the head, and he knew he had sent men after him? Did he ask you to go with him down-town, as he was afraid to go along? ——

Exceptions taken to the rulings of the Court. The witness was directed to stand down for the present.

TESTIMONY OF DANIEL P. INGRAHAM.

Daniel P. Ingraham, Jr., testified: I knew Mr. Stokes; I knew of his arrest for embezzlement at the instance of Col. Fisk; on the 6th of January last I saw him at Chamberlain & Dodge's, on Broadway, near Washington-place; it was about four o'clock in the afternoon; he was talking with a gentleman; he came up and shook hands with me; I asked him to go up Broadway with me; he said he had to go down to the corner of Amity-street and Broadway; he then went out; I walked away to go up-town; I saw Col. Fisk in his carriage near Astor-place; I recognised him; I bowed to him; I do not know whether he recognised me.

TESTIMONY OF JAMES BRENNAN.

James Brennan testified: I have been in the House of Refuge; I was brought down to the House of Detention as a witness in a case of homicide; I was then taken to the Tombs; while I was at the House of Detention I had a conversation with a prisoner of Thomas Hart; I had conversations with him in relation to the murder of Fisk; he told me that he knew nothing about the murder; that he was in another part of the hotel at the time; he mentioned the time he saw Stokes going in a particular direction, and that is all he knew about it; he said he was to have $1,000 and be fixed for the rest of his life if he would answer as he was told to; I asked him the reason, he said, why he testified before the Coroner's Jury; he said he would make his friends get me out of prison if I would say nothing about this.

In cross-examination by the District-Attorney elicited the fact that the charge on which this witness was committed to the House of Refuge was of stealing a watch. He had been committed ten or twelve times before.

Q.—Did he tell you at that time that the prisoner, Stokes, came up to the ladies' entrance? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did he tell you he came along the wall through the hall? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did he say he saw Stokes shoot Mr. Fisk? A.—Yes, Sir.

The counsel for the prisoner had by this time become quite restive, and Mr. Tremaine objected to any questions being asked except about the conversation as to which they had interrogated the witness. The counsel were consequently allowed when the witness volunteered the statement that Hart told him two different stories. The District-Attorney was proceeding with his cross-examination, when he was interrupted by Mr. Tremaine and Mr. McKeon simultaneously.

The Court (rapping vigorously with the gavel)—Gentlemen, you are exceedingly out of order.

DISTRICT-ATTORNEY (to counsel)—You seem to have a wonderful affection for this witness.

Mr. TREMAINE—Not so much as you have—you have kept him at hand a long time.

Mr. McKEON—I have taken every means to test the veracity of this witness.

Mr. McKeon re-examined the witness, eliciting from him the fact that he had been appointed a monitor at the House of Refuge for good conduct. He then reiterated his statement that Hart told him he saw Stokes shoot Fisk, and afterward said he was in a distant part of the hall, putting up a globe he had been cleaning, when he heard two shots fired, and, going in that direction, met Stokes, who said, "I have shot at the hall—run quick for a doctor." Then he ran back after Stokes, because he thought from his actions, and because no one else came from that direction, that it was he who had done the shooting. Hart, in telling his first story to witness, which he afterward said was false, stated that he was behind Stokes when he fired. I asked him, said the witness, why he hadn't pushed Stokes down-stairs. He said he wished he had, for then he would get plenty of money from Fisk for saving his life. He said the reason why he had sworn as he had was because a man told him at the Coroner's inquest if he would do so he would give him $1,000 and fix him right for the rest of his life. I told him he must be careful, or he might go to State Prison. He said, "Oh! I aint scared; some of the biggest men in the City are my friends."

JOHN F. REDMOND RECALLED.

Q.—By Mr. TREMAINE—Did you see this last witness, James Brennan? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you recollect talking with him about what you knew about the Fisk affair? A.—No, Sir; I have spoken to him, but nothing about the affair.

Q.—Did you say to him while you were there in that place that at the time Fisk was shot you were there, but you were so scared that you knew nothing at all about the transaction? A.—No, Sir.

JAMES BRENNAN RECALLED.

Q. By Mr. TREMAINE—Did you have a conversation with this boy Redmond, at the House of Detention? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did he tell you he were there at the time Fisk was shot, but that he was so scared that he knew nothing about the transaction? A.—Yes, Sir.

REDMOND RECALLED AGAIN.

By Mr. MCKEON—After the firing do you recollect being taken over to the Station-house, in Mercer-street? A.—Yes, Sir; I was taken into a room and seated there; the Captain's room.

[Here Bailey, a former witness, was directed to stand up.]

Q.—Did you see that gentleman there? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Do not you recollect being seated near him. A.—I do not.

Q.—Do you not remember ——? A.—There were a [illegible] asking you [illegible] Sir.

Q.—Did you not [illegible] that you were so [illegible] telling you [illegible] Sir.

Q.—Do you not remember [illegible] saying, "I know nothing about it?" A.—No, Sir. [positively.]

The Court then adjourned to this morning at 10½ o'clock.

ANOTHER ESCAPE FROM JAIL.

Two Daring Thieves Break Their Way Through Their Cell-Window at the Tombs—Both Convictions of the Escapees.

Not two weeks ago two boys, charged with rioting in the House of Refuge, on Ward's Island, squeezed through their cell-window in the Tombs, and, by means of a blanket, escaped. On Thursday night, between 11 and 11½ o'clock, two daring and desperate thieves confined in the Tombs escaped by almost the same means, which, however, in this instance were kindly provided for them by the authorities. Cell No. 38, on the third tier of the main building, was occupied by George Keele, of No. 342 West Fifty-fourth-street, charged with grand larceny and assault with intent to kill. Keele robbed a store in Eighth-avenue, where he was employed as clerk, and on being pursued by the proprietor, fired several shots at him. With Keele in the cell was also William Langton, of No. 129 Mott-street, charged with having stolen a large quantity of wearing apparel. At 11 o'clock on Thursday night Deputy Warden Orr saw the prisoners in their cell, and at 11½, the night-keepers Golden and McCaffrey found that they had escaped. They had wrenched a leg off their iron bedstead, and forced off the plate of iron upon it as a wiper for the window of the cell. The plate added an inch to the aperture, making the window 6½ inches in height by 28 inches in width. Since the escape of the House of Refuge boys from the prison workmen have been engaged putting bars into the cell windows of the prisoners. On Thursday they were putting bars into the window of the cell occupied by the two men occupied by Langton and Keele. After forcing off the plate the prisoners got through the window and lowered themselves by means of the rope-scaffold which the workmen had left behind to the roof of the cook-house directly beneath, and from thence against the prison-wall. They procured a ladder and ascended to the top of the prison-wall, looking out on Elm-street, down which they lowered each other by means of the rope, and so escaped. The Police are in search of them.

Hell Gate—Progress of the Works There—The First Explosion.

The work which is to culminate in the removal of the Hell Gate obstructions may now be considered as more than half accomplished. It is thought that about fifteen or eighteen months will yet be required to complete it, but this cannot be done unless Congress makes additional appropriations. The subject will be pressed at the opening of the next session, and it is not believed that a work of so much importance will be allowed to stop. The work is a wonderful piece of engineering.

Viewed from the head of the stairway, it reminds one of a railroad engine-house, being semicircular in form, and having ten embrasures, with tracks leading back to the terminus of the tunnels. A turning-table in the centre of the shaft makes the simile all the more complete. Only ten tunnels are visible from the outside, but there are sixteen all told, six commencing in the interior of the work. Four galleries or intersecting tunnels are now completed, and the fifth has been commenced, thus leaving the rock above, which is about ten feet thick, resting on solid columns. Some of these columns have already been pierced for the reception of nitro-glycerine. The main tunnels are numbered and named as follows: Farragut, Madison, Humphrey, Hoffman, Sherman, Jefferson, Grant, McClellan, Franklin and Jackson. As usual, Gen. Grant is ahead, the tunnel bearing his name being 230 feet long. The aggregate length of these excavations exceeds 3,000 feet. The depth of the shaft is 34 feet.

Visitors to the works should by no means go in their best clothes. The leakage from above is so great that the pumps are kept constantly going, and even with the use of an umbrella the incautious investigator is likely to come out with his clothes considerably the worse for the journey. Supplied with a candle, the visitor gropes his way through the dark, sometimes descending at an angle of about forty-five degrees, until he reaches the dim light at the end of the tunnel. Here the workmen are found, some drilling and others shoveling up the loose stones. If he is fortunate enough to get into the gallery where the electric drill is in operation, he will be well paid for his trouble, although it does deafen him with noise. There are two drills of this kind here, but one is now undergoing repair. The bore made by this machine is an inch and a half in diameter, and the cores, sometimes four feet in length, can be had of the miners. The drilling here is conducted on the principle of blasting, which occurs three times a day, and is now done altogether with nitro-glycerine. When powder is used the stones are so large that the use of the hammer is necessary, where as the glycerine breaks them into fine pieces.

When the charges are to be exploded, a gong is sounded, the workmen retreat to a place of safety previously indicated, and an investigatory does the work of explosion. The thundering, smothered sound of the successive charges, forcibly reminds the visitor of a battery of forty-pounders in full play. When the volumes of smoke have disappeared, the workmen return, and the operations of drilling and removing the débris are recommenced. Specimens of ore are produced from the miners, or from the piles of rock on the shore. Garnets, mica and quartz abound.

The apprehensions of danger, when the general explosion takes place, are entirely groundless, as the confidence of Mr. Newton, the general superintendent of the work, of the fact, that he intends to remain in his office, about 300 feet from the shaft, when the final charge is exploded. On completion of the work of excavation and the nitro-glycerine ready, the coffer-dam will be cut, and, as it is easier to raise a weight under water than to lower it in the shaft, and this will be flooded, and with the discharge of the electric spark the dangers of Hell Gate will no longer exist. But should the explosion by any accident not prove successful, or, indeed, if it should never take place, there will still be sufficient room for the largest ocean steamers to pass through, as the shaft after the coffer-dam shall have been cut.

The California Mustang.

A California paper, which fears that the native California horse will soon be numbered among the things of the past, says:

"With all his defects he has some qualities and points of rare value that should be preserved. He can thrive and subsist where the American or English bloods would starve; is fleet and sure-footed as the mule, while his powers of endurance in the harness or under the saddle are unequaled. He is small and very satisfied, but, as symmetrical as the Arabian; wild by nature, and often vicious, but always spirited, and, with proper training and kind treatment, frequently exhibits all the affectionate sensibilities of the best breeds. It is no uncommon feat for him to carry a good rider 100 miles in a day, and in emergencies like many of them can go much further in that time. We have seen specimens that, at the age of sixteen years, were as gay and fiery as the best blooded five-year olds, and that would kill the most enduring of them on a short or long journey. As saddle horses they are preferred by all who know them best, as they are also for all light work. It has always seemed to us passing strange that no attempt has ever yet been made in California to preserve the admirable qualities of this ancient stock of horses in their purity. To permit them to ignobly perish, as now seems likely, would be as singular as unfortunate."

The Liberty-Street Explosion—Inquest on Fireman Burke.

Coroner Schirmer held an inquest yesterday in the case of Edward Burke, the fireman of Engine Company, No. 4, who died from injuries received on the 22d ult., in the explosion of chemicals at the laboratory of Geo. A. Erkenbach, at No. 12 Liberty-street. A number of witnesses were examined, but the testimony was similar to that which was given before Fire Marshal McSpedon, and which has been already published. It was shown that the explosion was caused by the contents of a carboy of nitrous ether leaking through the dilapidated flooring into the restaurant below, where it ignited by the vapor coming in contact with the gas-light. The jury censured Mr. A. McLyes, the owner of the building, for not making the necessary repairs to the floor, after having been repeatedly requested to do so.

Fire in West Twenty-Seventh-Street.

At 1:40 A. M. yesterday a fire occurred in the distillery and dwelling of Jos. McConnell, No. 235 West Twenty-seventh-street, and the flames spread so rapidly that Mrs. McConnell, the wife of the occupant, leaped out of a second-story window to the ground and was seriously injured. The damage to the stock and furniture is estimated at $2,000; insured for $2,250 in the Star Company. The fire extended to the apartments of Michael Nicholas, on the upper floor. Damage to the furniture, $1,000. The building is owned by Wm. Meyers, and is damaged to the extent of $500; insured.

AMONG THE POOR.

A Visit to the Poor Children of the First Ward.

Joyous Reception of the News of the Coming Excursion—Misery and Foul Air—The Little Coffin—Tenements.

A recent visit to the parents of children living in the Sixth Ward resulted in so favorable a manner as to induce a visit to the same class of persons living in the First Ward. In company with Officer Dennison of the Twenty-seventh Precinct, a TIMES reporter visited quite a large number of families yesterday in the tenements of Washington-street. The first visits were made with some distrust of the favorable results; but when the children began to thoroughly understand the object of the call, they rushed around with the tidings that all the children were to "go on a picnic." In the first house visited there were six large stream families, some of them containing as many as seven children. After fully explaining that the object was to provide the children with pleasure, free of expense to the parents, several of the women promised that they would send their little ones if they knew of any of their neighbors being the same. Leaving this house the children pressed forward to the next tenement, and while the object of the visit was being repeated, their silly prattling soon revealed the protest on the other children, and proved quite powerful in enlightening the older persons. Some of the women suggested the bath, and said they would be glad to have their little ones out early in the morning, rather than part with them for one day to take a trip to the country. Others said they had no time, and indeed the evidence of their telling the truth was visible in huge bundles of soiled or damp clothing that they had brought home to wash; two or three were merely independent, saying they could send their "children" to the country themselves if they wished to have them go; while two timid, over-worked women, with seven children each, feared a repetition of some of the disasters their imagination had magnified to an unlimited extent. Leaving the premises they were going to remain some where the prospect of getting a little fresh air or a trip to the country was hailed with delight, one anxious mother declaring she would spread the news far and wide that some kind gentlemen and ladies would aid them in giving their little ones a breath of air outside the heated streets. As the visits continued the objections grew less frequent, and suspicious less apparent, until in the end a goodly number of tired mothers and sickly-looking little ones began to rejoice in the prospect of a pleasure trip, and inquiries grew thick and fast of when, where, and how they could all have the pleasure of being proposed from an apartment foul air, the late intense heat and want had done their work, and the result was lying in a little coffin, covered with a white sheet. The neighbors sat around in sad sympathy with the sorrowful mother, whose only regret was that she could not have had her "dead pet" go to the country long ago, and perhaps have yet lived to see the day. She hailed with delight the prospect of giving her surviving children the unwonted pleasure denied the dead; but spoke in a subdued tone, not in reverence of death, but in fear of the brutal husband and father, who sat at the foot of the little coffin, evidently under the fire of intoxication that already burns fiercely in every vein. Although many of the tenements visited yesterday bore evidence of an attempt at cleanliness not exhibited in those of the Sixth Ward, the air was stifling, and the heat almost beyond endurance. Many of the women, as well as the children, were as nearly naked as decency would permit, their faces, necks and arms covered with the sticky sweat to such an extent that an ordinary observer might have judged them to be suffering from some horrible eruption. After calling on the inmates of the tenements between Liberty and Morris streets, our representative returned through Washington-street to find that the object of the visits had become the topic of general discussion, and had also begun to gain upon the confidence of the people, many of the children crying as they passed "My mother says I can go on the excursion it Susie or Johnnie Brown goes."

Water facilities in these buildings are on a par with the same class of houses in other parts of the City. One house had water on the different floors; all the others were supplied from hydrants in the basements or adjoining yards. The average size of the apartments occupied by each family is about eighteen by ten feet, with one and in some cases two windows opening to let water air from a neighbor's yard, and occasionally a small window opening into the hall to afford ventilation to the dark hole where the beds are piled one upon the other, to be thrown upon the floor for the use of the sweltering tenants. On the "top floors,"—for these laty-minded citizens scorn the idea of living on the ground floor—the sloping roofs slope down to within a foot or two of the floor, and breathing is attended with such a sense of suffocation that one escapes as speedily as possible from the heated atmosphere only to meet a throng of half-clad children, whose appearance indicates a total ignorance of soap and water, but who possess in common with their "betters" the establishment of public baths. Should these much-desired boons be established in the First Ward with proper supervision, the physical aspect of that quarter would soon present visible signs of improvement, while the death-rate would decrease proportionately. Men, women and children would all avail themselves of the benefits of the invigorating bath, and with the advent of cleanliness of persons might also accrue tidiness of apartments, the consequent comfort of fathers who now spend much of their time away from the family, and the entire result be one of happiness, to whom many of the poor are now total strangers.

DR. PRIESTLEY READMITTED.

A Vote of 14 to 9 in His Favor at a Special Meeting of the Monongahela Presbytery—An Appeal Taken.

From the Pittsburg (Penn.) Gazette, July 4.

The principal theme of conversation yesterday in Presbyterian circles was the decision in the case of James Priestley, who recently made application to be reinstated in his church membership. The matter came up at a meeting of the Monongahela Presbytery last week, and yesterday was specially set apart for its consideration. At the appointed hour there was an average attendance of the members of the Presbytery, from the surrounding country, to hold the Hebron Presbyterian Church, a short distance beyond Wilkinsburg. Rev. S. B. Reed acted as Moderator, and after the usual devotional exercises and several minor matters of business had been attended to, the special subject before the Presbytery was called up. The psalm-book of Dr. Priestley as published in the Gazette was read, after which speeches in support of it were made by Rev. Messrs. Ormond and Hutchinson, who contended that Dr. Priestley having confessed his errors, had done all that human or Divine law required. They were followed by the petitioner, Dr. Priestley, who made a very earnest and solemn address, which created considerable sympathy, and in a large measure helped his cause. He dwelt at some length upon the causes which had led to his excommunication from the Church, (our readers are familiar with the history,) and expressed his sorrow therefor and his great desire and anxiety to be restored to communion. Rev. Dr. W. J. Reid and Rev. Dr. John G. Brown addressed the Presbytery in opposition to granting the prayer, on the ground that as the excommunicated brother had been convicted and expelled upon specific charges, that his confession should not be a general one, but specific, to indicate his sincere and hearty repentance. The fact of his divorce from his first wife and marriage to a second was also incidently referred to and the argument urged that the divorce had not been in accordance with the requirements of the church laws, and consequently the second marriage was not legal. These points on both sides were discussed at considerable length, but it was generally believed that the warmth and acrimonious spirit, which too often is displayed in such matters. This fact had a marked effect in allaying the excitement among the visitors and all interested in the case.

The discussion closed shortly before 2 o'clock, Presbytery having been in session three hours, when a vote was taken on a motion to grant the petitioner's prayer and admit him into church fellowship. The result was fourteen in favor and nine against, a result which was hailed with delight by the friends of Dr. Priestley, who went not long in warmly congratulating him.

When the result was announced, Rev. Mr. Reid gave notice that the case would be appealed to Synod, and filed the preliminary papers, which were signed by himself and Rev. Messrs. S. B. Reed and John G. Brown. Synod will meet next Fall, when the case in all probability will be finally settled.

Not Even to Steal.

William Lundie, a noted Eighteenth Ward desperado, was held for trial on a charge of highway robbery, by Justice Scott, at Essex Market, on the 9th of June last. The bail in the case was fixed at $5,000. On Monday last some persons went to the District-Attorney's office and bailed him out. On the night of the 3d of July Lundie met Mr. Thomas Biggin, of No. 239 East Thirty-first-street, at the corner of Twenty-second-street and Third-avenue, and striking him a terrible blow in the face, robbed him of all the money he had about him. At 9 o'clock on the afternoon of the 3d of July, Samuel Miller, a Spaniard living in Bayard-street, was [illegible] the corner of [illegible] and Elizabeth-street, where Patrick Gallagher, of East Nineteenth-street, and one Thomas Finney, were. They robbed Miller of $18 in coin. Lundie and Gallagher were arrested, and on being arraigned before Justice [illegible] yesterday, were committed for trial without bail.

SUNDAY PROCESSIONS.

Trial of Six Police Captains for Allowing Music—The Evidence and Defense—"Don't Do It Again."

Six Police Captains were yesterday placed on trial before Commissioners Manierre and Bosworth, on the charge of allowing processions, accompanied by music, to pass through their precincts on Sunday, June 23, in violation of the State Law and the General Orders, No. 66, of the Police Department. The Roman Catholic Church of St. John the Baptist was to be dedicated on that day, and a few days before, Valentine Fink, the Grand Marshal, made an application to the Board of Police, through the Clerk to the Superintendent, for the necessary permits. The Marshal said that he told the Clerk about the music, but the application, which had been filled upon a blank, said nothing about music; therefore the procession was allowed to march, but no permission for music was granted. The procession marched on the day indicated, and the six precincts, namely, the Eighth, Eleventh, Fifteenth, Seventeenth, Twentieth and Twenty-second, music was played, but was kindly stopped by Capt. Burden, of the Twenty-ninth Precinct. Complaints having been made of the alleged violation of the police on this particular occasion, Superintendent Kelso, by orders from the Commissioners, preferred charges against Capts. McCullough, Murphy, Byrnes, Walsh, Killalea and Caffrey, and they were yesterday brought up for trial.

Capt. McCullough, of the Eighth, was first placed on the stand, although no complaint was made against all the Captains.

Superintendent Kelso testified that he had sent out a general alarm notifying the Captains that the church societies had received the necessary permission to parade, but that they would parade in uniform, and would be in procession. The order was to be furnished from the Twenty-ninth Precinct. He had been informed that the order with regard to the music had not been complied with.

Officer Bradley, of the Eighth Precinct, testified that the music was not played until the procession had passed Ninth-street; the time had been formed on South Fifth-avenue, and went through Canal-street to Thompson-street; they had a band with them, but did not play as they passed him; when he heard the music he tried to overtake them, but could not; he had received orders from the Captain to arrest any band playing music on a Sunday, and report the fact; he did not do so, because when they began to play, and the procession was half a block away; witness did not think it necessary to prevent the music after the procession had left his precinct; had made no report to the Captain.

Capt. McCullough, in defense, said he had been on all night, and laid down about 4 o'clock on Sunday morning; as the procession moved early, he knew nothing whatever about the music being played until spoken to on the following day by Inspector Dilks and Superintendent Kelso.

Capt. Byrnes, of the Fifteenth Precinct, was next placed on the stand.

Officers Barry and Carpenter, of that precinct, testified that they saw the procession and heard the music. Officer Carpenter said he heard the music faintly and followed the sounds, but when he had got to the end of his post the procession was out of sight, and he consequently made no report.

Capt. Byrnes said he had retired to rest at four o'clock in the morning, and knew nothing of the music until spoken to about it at Police Head-quarters.

Capt. Murphy, of the Eleventh, was next placed.

Nicholas Hesler, of No. 120 Fifth-street, testified that he was one of the members of the society that formed in Pitt-street, between Stanton and Houston streets; he saw the society form into line, but heard no music.

To Advertisers.

☞ For the accommodation of up-town residents, advertisements for insertion in the TIMES will be received at No. 54 West 33d-st., junction of Broadway and 6th-av.; No. 308 West 23d-st., opposite Grand Opera-house, and No. 1,241 Broadway, between 30th and 31st-sts., at same rates as are charged at office of publication.

☞ The NEW-YORK TIMES has opened a branch office in Brooklyn at No. 111 Fulton-st., junction of Fulton and Main, where advertisements will be received until 5 P. M.

☞ Throughout the Presidential canvass, we shall publish fuller reports of meetings and conventions in each State than any other New-York journal. Very full dispatches will be forwarded by telegraph, supplemented by careful letters. Our desire is to place before the public the latest and most trustworthy information, and we have made ample arrangements for that purpose.

The deaths in New-York for the week have, so far, reached the total of 1,548. Should the average daily mortality be sustained to-morrow the total number of deaths for the week will touch the almost unprecedented total of 1,572. How appalling a death-rate this represents may be understood from the fact that it is equal to 84.8 per 1,000 per annum—a rate which, if maintained, would leave New-York a desert at no very remote period. It is just four times the average rate of a moderately healthy European city. It is unnecessary to add that a very large portion of the increase is accounted for by the fearful mortality among children.

One CHAMBERLAIN is the reputed father of the "Labor Reform" movement which placed DAVIS and PARKER in the field for the Presidential canvass. His candidates having prudently declined to lead where there were so few to follow, he is now figuring for some new and more complaisant victims. He is probably the most thorough demagogue of all who make "labor reform" a profession; and it is on men of his class the responsibility rests for the miserable experience of the working men in striking in this City last month.

The Brooklyn Eagle fails to see what it calls "the relevancy of an indictment against a Governor, then a Mayor, for not committing fraud." This remark is based upon the second part of our indictment against Mayor HOFFMAN, viz., that he turned his back for the purpose of allowing Alderman COMAN to sign warrants which he was too "respectable" to put his own signature to. Would the Eagle see the relevancy of an indictment against the guardian of a clothing-store who should open the doors at midnight to a gang of thieves, but should decline participation in their operations with the remark, "Gentlemen, this is not in my line, but take as much as you have a mind to!" Meanwhile, will the Eagle publish our charges of direct participation in fraud by Mayor HOFFMAN?

The Americus Club is already "discounting" the triumph of the Greeley Ticket. The head-quarters of the Club are to be opened to-day with all their lavish display of magnificence, as costly as it is vulgar. Would it pay to allow these harpies to get their hands into the National Treasury, so as to permit their coarse pleasures and sensual pictures to be paid for by the general body of tax-payers? The citizens of New-York retain the proud consciousness of having been graciously allowed to house their rowdy rulers like princes. They are tired of supporting the Americus Club, and those who like it can undertake the job and welcome.

The present peculiar attitude of the French Executive toward the Assembly can be more readily understood when it is remembered that the present constituent body, though nominally "national," is not really representative of the people. All the recent elections have shown that an appeal to the country would result in the return of a body much stronger in Republican members than the existing one. It is the consciousness of this fact which makes M. THIERS very prompt to defy the Assembly, and which makes the Assembly very little disposed to run the risk of terminating their own and M. THIERS' official life at the same moment.

"Gov. HOFFMAN and his family are at Newport," says the Greeley organ, but not one word does it add about the shameful nature of this "loitering" on the part of the Executive of the Empire State. It is equally silent on the Governor's "nepotism" in appointing his father-in-law to a very fat office, as well as on His Excellency's "manipulation" of his high office to secure a renomination "by a corrupt bargain with the Cincinnati party."

A call will be found in our columns this morning for a Soldiers' and Sailors' Convention on the 17th of September next, in this City, to express the convictions of the veterans of the war in favor of GRANT and WILSON. The call is signed by a number of officers, who chanced to meet at the Philadelphia Convention in June, among whom are Gens. BURNSIDE, WAGNER, HAWLEY, FAIRCHILD, NEGLEY, MCCOOK, OGLESBY, BARLOW and NOYES.

Lyman Trumbull.

After the late "Liberal" Convention in Illinois had been swallowed by the Democratic Convention, Mr. TRUMBULL, addressing the crowd, according to the report, thus uttered himself: "Nothing is left of the Republican Party except the organization, which has fallen into the hands of men who seek to prostitute the party to their own selfish ends." These words are like Mr. TRUMBULL; they are words of self-righteousness, and imputation upon others. For months he has repeated countless times, "I am holier than thou." Through his many varying phases this idea constantly runs. He is a chronic impugner of the motives of leading men in the party he has deserted. Surely, therefore, he is a proper subject for consideration. Whenever a man tenders himself as a witness against others, his own character, credibility and motives are put in issue. If he be himself guilty of the sins he lays at the doors of others, if he be malevolent in his motives, if he have personal ends and interests in view, his testimony deserves little consideration. Mr. TRUMBULL deals in a group of accusations, and these he levels at the President, his fellow-Senators, and at all who bear up the Republican banner. He charges disregard of law; he stigmatizes appointments of relatives to office; he denounces as a crime permitting personal or party considerations to influence official patronage; he rails at selfishness in public men;—he thus holds himself out as guileless in all these things, and he seeks to injure others by his accusations.

We propose to examine the claims of Mr. TRUMBULL to this right of censorship. A few facts in his career will reveal the value of his testimony.

He has been a constant office-holder and office-seeker for nearly thirty years. He is an office-holder now, and yet he gives much time (sometimes leaving his seat in the Senate for the purpose) to managing and intriguing in politics, all the while loudly denouncing office-holders for mingling in politics. He climbed into the United States Senate over the Constitution of his State. The Constitution of Illinois declares, "The Judges of the Supreme and Circuit Courts shall not be eligible to any other office or public trust of profit in this State, or the United States, during the term for which they were elected, nor for one year thereafter. All votes for either of them, for any elective office, except that of Judge of the Supreme or Circuit Courts, given by the General Assembly, shall be void."

Mr. TRUMBULL was elected Judge June 7, 1852, and entered upon the office, and his term continued till June 27, 1861; yet, ineligible as he was, by efforts of his own and of his friends he procured a majority of votes in the Legislature to be cast for him, during this judicial term, and then he overrode the Constitution of his State by gaining admission to the Senate. Money was used in his behalf to carry the election of legislators whose votes elected him to the Senate, particularly in one well-established instance, and, unless belied by those who know him best, scruples about means to party ends are not among his weaknesses. His brother-in-law, WILLIAM JAYNE, was elected, or counted into the Legislature of Illinois in 1861, not without the use of money, raised in part by appeals on behalf of Mr. TRUMBULL, in other States; and Mr. JAYNE's vote gave the Republicans a majority of one in the Illinois Senate. Mr. JAYNE's vote gave the election to Mr. TRUMBULL.

Soon after Mr. JAYNE cast his vote for Mr. TRUMBULL, and when Mr. JAYNE's legislative term was only begun, Mr. TRUMBULL applied to President LINCOLN to appoint Mr. JAYNE Governor of a Territory. Mr. LINCOLN remonstrated, saying that to take Mr. JAYNE from his place in the Legislature of Illinois would leave the body to which he belonged without a Republican majority, which, in view of measures essential to carrying on the war, might lead to great public injury. Mr. TRUMBULL was impervious to Mr. LINCOLN's objections, and succeeded in carrying his point, and his brother-in-law was appointed Governor of Dakota.

By this act, as Mr. LINCOLN foresaw, the Republicans lost control of the Legislature of Illinois. And here, though out of the order of events, another fact may be stated, connected with this same brother-in-law. The Pension Agency, at Springfield, Ill., was given by President GRANT to Gen. BLOOMFIELD, a Union soldier, who earned his promotion and lost a limb in the war. Presently Mr. TRUMBULL coveted the place for his brother-in-law, JAYNE, and applied to the President for it. President GRANT told him of BLOOMFIELD's services and sufferings and bravery as a soldier. He reminded him that BLOOMFIELD was an unexceptionable officer, that he was an ardent Republican withal, at the same time saying that if any trust was appropriate to a wounded soldier, it was the business of paying to other wounded soldiers their pensions; and he appealed to Mr. TRUMBULL not to ask him to turn out such a man, merely because the position was asked for another. Mr. TRUMBULL met these suggestions with importunate solicitations that the place should be given to his brother-in-law, and in the end the President yielded, and BLOOMFIELD was turned out, and JAYNE put in. Turning out and putting in men from favor is a new aversion of Mr. TRUMBULL; preferring relatives is only lately a sin in his eyes.

After many requests had been complied with, by "taking care of his friends," Mr. TRUMBULL applied to President GRANT to appoint his son Collector of Internal Revenue for the Territory of Montana. The character and career of the young man was such as to render the appointment wait and smile. The President, in several interviews, excused himself to Mr. TRUMBULL from making the appointment, and at length, when the request was again repeated, positively declined. Here occurred one of the only two instances in which President GRANT has been subjected to menace by those seeking patronage. Senator TRUMBULL betook himself to violent language and gestures, declaring to the President that "he'd see, before he had done, whether his son could be appointed or not."

Mr. TRUMBULL's propensity for family politics is not without other illustrations. For years past, a son, and in his absence another near relative, has been at all times kept in the clerkship of the Judiciary Committee, Mr. TRUMBULL being Chairman and controlling the appointment. Mr. BROWN, a very intimate friend and ally of Mr. TRUMBULL, was brought by him from Illinois, and made Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate. Mr. TRUMBULL, by efforts often noticeable for their intensity and excess, maintained in place this "henchman," as Mr. GRIMES once styled him in the Senate. The relationships between Mr. TRUMBULL and Mr. BROWN, taken in connection with various transactions to which both were privy, present a case far outrunning all ordinary instances of getting a friend an office, or of being served by a friend in office.

Those who know the history of house-building by the late Sergeant-at-Arms, and who have heard a reckoning of the collection of books found, on his removal, stored away in the caverns of the Capitol, and who have also heard how these vast piles of documents were suddenly protected by a Senator's label, will appreciate in part these reminiscences.

An interest in obtaining places is not the only interest Mr. TRUMBULL has evinced in the welfare of relatives. The award of contracts at a Department, where a relative was a bidder, has not always been left to go without the supervision of the Senator. Few men have been more frequent or urgent in demands upon the appointing power. Apart from personal applications and requests, Mr. TRUMBULL stands recorded upward of one hundred times, after Gen. GRANT came in, requesting or suggesting appointments. Sometimes he appears by letter, saying, "I very much desire that —— should be appointed Governor of Wyoming, and if not of Wyoming, of some other Territory." Or, he concludes an application by saying, "There are also two or three persons whose appointment as Consuls would be very gratifying to me." These requests were largely granted, and Mr. TRUMBULL was never found assailing office-getting, or office-giving, or "nepotism," until his own demands grew too great to be complied with.

When the President refused to appoint his son, gratitude changed from a sense of the many favors done to a lively sense of benefits to come from new alliances. The very acts of the President now most bitterly denounced had Mr. TRUMBULL's full assent. So the acts of Congress which he now assails received his vote. When Mr. STEWART was nominated Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. TRUMBULL voted to confirm him, and when the law was found in Mr. STEWART's way, Mr. TRUMBULL saw a mode of getting round it.

When the acts of Congress now denounced as despotic and centralizing were passed, Mr. TRUMBULL urged and voted for them—and for the strongest of them. All this, however, was before his vote upon the impeachment of ANDREW JOHNSON, and other acts, had destroyed his prospect of obtaining another Senatorial term from the Republicans of Illinois.

Discredited with his party in his own State, and having obtained from the Administration of President GRANT all that could be reached, Mr. TRUMBULL turned to new combinations, in the hope, first, of a nomination for the Presidency by the "Outs," to be accepted by the Democrats; and, failing in this, in the hope of getting back to the Senate, by combining the support of all the enemies of the Administration. Disappointed as Cincinnati, he is earning the favor of the disaffected, the disappointed, the mercenary, and at the same time of the Democratic Party, by turning his back upon the professions of years. Reversing position suddenly is nothing new with Mr. TRUMBULL. Politics are not the only field in which short and profitable turns mark his path. Here is an instance: The Illinois Central Railroad received vast grants from the United States. One of the conditions of these grants was that in time of war troops and munitions should be carried for the Government free of charge. During the rebellion, in the din and crush of the occasion, the War Department, without reference to this condition, allowed the railroad freights exceeding two million dollars. When time was found to take breath, attention was called to the claim for this great sum, for services which the law exacted in return for the grant, and a bill was introduced into the House of Representatives to save this money to the Government.

Mr. WASHBURN, of Illinois, a warm friend of President GRANT, was a warm supporter of the bill. Other members from Illinois also supported it. Senator TRUMBULL was quoted for it, when it should reach the Senate, and it threatened to give the railroads serious trouble. Representatives of the implicated interests flocked to the rescue, and suddenly Senator TRUMBULL appeared as the most active and busy opponent of the bill. He haunted the House of Representatives, to point out to members the wrong and injustice of such a measure. After a persistent struggle, the bill was defeated, and then came a curious coincidence. Senator TRUMBULL was credited with defeating the bill, and forthwith GEORGE TRUMBULL, the brother and law partner of the Senator, was made General Attorney for the Illinois Central Railroad, at an annual salary of ten or twelve thousand dollars a year. GEORGE TRUMBULL was notoriously inadequate to such a place, and the man put out to make room for him was distinguished for his capacity and faithfulness. This gentleman, thus suddenly displaced, applied to the President of the road for an explanation, asking if any fault was found with him. The answer was, in substance, "No fault with you; far from it. It was necessary to give the place to Mr. TRUMBULL. No explanation can be made. Things are sometimes necessary which cannot be explained." The deposed attorney was immediately informed that he was still relied upon to do the work, and was requested to continue it, charging for his professional services as he would charge clients in general; and he did continue, the law partner and brother of the Senator receiving the salary, but the man he superseded furnishing the brain and the service required. Another affair shows the Senator an adept at turning a professional penny with legislative opportunity. The case of MCCARDLE is here referred to. MCCARDLE was arrested and detained under the Reconstruction acts, for stirring up turbulence in the late rebel States. He sued out a writ of habeas corpus from the United States Circuit Court of Mississippi, and, after hearing, was remanded to imprisonment by the Court. He claimed the right of appeal to the Supreme Court, and the impression prevailed that several of the Supreme Judges (the Bench being then not full) were biased against the Reconstruction acts.

Excited as the times then were, much apprehension prevailed of the ill effects of a decision disturbing existing legislation, and the right of appeal being questionable, it was thought wise by some to settle the matter at once by act of Congress.

It was proposed to declare by law that in such cases jurisdiction should be confined to the Circuit and District Courts of the United States. This Senator TRUMBULL strenuously resisted, on the ground that no appeal or writ of error to the Supreme Court lay in such a case. This position, he insisted, could be surely maintained before the Court itself. On the other hand, it was urged by Senators that, if such were the law already, no harm could come from so declaring it; that at that stage of the proceeding there was no unfairness or impropriety in legislating upon it, and that if the Court should assert its jurisdiction, to legislate afterward might be open to grave objection. Senator TRUMBULL resisted all proposals of legislative action with noticeable pertinacity, and, being Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, was a hon in the path.

In the absence of legislation, the case proceeded. Mr. STANTON consulted two Senators, neither of whom was Senator TRUMBULL, as to the propriety of their appearing in the case as counsel. These Senators found, in the act of Congress forbidding Senators to make any contract with the Government, for services or otherwise, and also in the possible need of legislation in regard to the matter, insuperable objections to their accepting employment in the case. It turned out, however, that Senator TRUMBULL was employed as counsel. He presently went into Court, in December, 1867, and moved to dismiss the appeal for want of jurisdiction, stating the grounds previously insisted on in his conversations with Senators. The Court, at the same time, denied the motion, and decided that it had jurisdiction. On the 2d, 3d, 4th and 9th of the following March (1868) the case was argued on its merits, Mr. CARPENTER (not then Senator) acting as chief counsel, but Mr. TRUMBULL also taking part. The Court held the case under advisement, and the impression went abroad that the decision would be in MCCARDLE's favor. Thereupon, and within two days, an amendment ousting the Court of jurisdiction was moved in the House to a bill enlarging the jurisdiction of the Court in revenue cases. It passed without observation, went to the Senate, and passed there with less than five minutes' discussion on the 12th of March, three days after the argument in the Court. Senator TRUMBULL voted for it on the yeas and nays. The bill was vetoed on account of this provision, its object having meanwhile become known to all, and on the 25th of March the veto message was taken up in the Senate. Senator TRUMBULL urged immediate consideration, unless all would agree to a final vote the next day. An agreement was accordingly made to vote the next day at 6 o'clock, when, upon the yeas and nays, Mr. TRUMBULL voted to pass the bill over the veto, and it did pass. By whom this amendment was prepared, who carried it to the House, who claimed credit for controlling and fixing the whole affair, cannot be learned from the record; but Mr. SUMNER, now Minister to Great Britain, Mr. JAMES F. WILSON, of Iowa, and several others, members of Congress then, could tell. Some of them have told.

For his services Senator TRUMBULL charged and obtained $10,000 from the Treasury, apart from his pay as Senator, the bill being presented in his own handwriting.

One thousand dollars was paid him on the 7th of March, 1868, two thousand dollars on the 6th of April, 1868, and seven thousand on the 22d of April, 1868. At the time of this employment, and at the time of each of these payments, an impeachment of ANDREW JOHNSON was pending, and on the 26th of May, 1868, one month and three days after the last payment, Senator TRUMBULL, differing with the great body of his party, voted to acquit ANDREW JOHNSON. A mind and a heart less [illegible] might add to the undeniable sinfulness of these transactions an unpleasant association of dates. Senator TRUMBULL sought to bolster his predicament by stating in the Senate recently that the formal retainer received the signature of Gen GRANT, temporarily acting Secretary of War, and by leaving it to be inferred that Gen. GRANT or Mr. STANTON, and not ANDREW JOHNSON, really gave him this money-making opportunity. Obviously Gen. GRANT, obeying the order of the President, and acting for a few days as locum tenens of the War Department while Mr. STANTON was dispossessed, was not the author or originator of Mr. TRUMBULL's selection as counsel. Mr. STANTON's known bad opinion of Mr. TRUMBULL, and the hostility of Mr. TRUMBULL to Mr. STANTON, leave no reason to believe that Mr. STANTON, who consulted with other Senators as to their being employed and concurred in its impropriety, at the same time asked Mr. TRUMBULL to disregard propriety binding all Senators alike. An incident now here be mentioned bearing on the probability of Mr. STANTON's having selected Senator TRUMBULL as the recipient of such a favor. Only the year after the events we are relating, every Senator to whom it was presented save one signed a letter warmly commending Mr. STANTON to the President for Justice of the Supreme Court. Senator TRUMBULL alone refused his signature; and when Mr. STANTON was told of those who signed and of him who refused, he declared that he felt as well certified by the refusal of the one as he did by the signatures of the rest.

Here we leave for the present this accuser of other men.

Mr. Greeley's Epitaph.

The "Sage of Chappaquis" must have been in a despondent humor when he made his little speech to the members of the Press at Boston on Wednesday. He had evidently abandoned all hopes of being elected President, since he told his hearers that "his destiny had been associated through life with such as they, and with such as they it would continue to be associated to the end"—a contingency that is hardly probable in case of the success of the Cincinnati ticket—unless, indeed, the "Sage" proposes to make up his Cabinet and carry on his Administration exclusively with journalists, in which case DANA, of the Sun, who is his oldest newspaper associate, would, of course, be given the first place. We trust Uncle HORACE does not design to withdraw from the canvass, at least not till after the Baltimore Convention, bad as is the outlook, for in that event half of the fun of the campaign will be spoiled. But when a man's mind begins to dwell upon his epitaph, and he manifests an anxiety to write it out and read it in advance, his friends naturally conclude that life has lost its attractions for him, and that he is getting ready to make his exit. Mr. GREELEY is reported as concluding his speech to the Press correspondents as follows:

"If the world shall say of me, in the end, 'he was a good printer, a respectable publisher, and an honest editor,' all my ambition will be satisfied."

Glad as the world would doubtless be to gratify a despondent candidate for the Presidency who professes such moderate ambition, we are sorely afraid that Mr. GREELEY has lived a few years too many to elicit from posterity the verdict he desires. Had he died some fifteen years ago, or just before he wrote his famous letter dissolving the "firm of SEWARD, WEED and GREELEY," his countrymen might, perhaps, have been willing to inscribe the above epitaph upon his tombstone. But that letter entirely changed the popular estimate of his character. It revealed him in the light of a man who was not content with being a "good printer, a respectable publisher and an honest editor," but who had an insatiable itching for public office—an itching which he was willing to make any sacrifice of friendship or principle to gratify. Up to that time Mr. GREELEY had carefully concealed this object of his ambition, not only from the readers of his paper, but from his political friends and partners; since that time it has been his ruling passion, displayed on all occasions and at all times, and known of all men. It has led him into all sorts of inconsistencies and contradictions, and has involved him in the most unnatural and corrupt alliances. As he has grown older, the passion has grown stronger, until it has finally reached a point where we find him ready to go back on the record of his whole past life, to eat his own words, daily and vehemently expressed during a period of forty years, to betray the party which he boasts of having created, and to beg votes at the hands of his enemies, whom he has vilified and traduced in every conceivable form for a quarter of a century.

This is the attitude in which he now stands before the public, and, unless he mends his ways, the world will say of him "in the end," if it says anything, substantially as follows:

"Here was a man who might have been, and was at one time, a good printer, a respectable publisher, and an honest editor, but whose excessive vanity, love of notoriety, and craving for public office, (for which he was totally unfitted,) betrayed him, in the latter part of his life, into the most extraordinary course of conduct, and made him an object of pity with his friends, a butt for his enemies, and the laughing-stock of a whole nation."

Family Jars.

The wretched domestic quarrel that occurred the other day in New-Orleans has received extraordinary publicity, and it would be strange if it had not. Simply as a piece of current intelligence, the newspapers throughout the country have published the opening steps of this dismal quarrel, which has now passed into a fresh phase even more remarkable than the first. It is but just to say, since the course of Mrs. BRONSON-HOLBROOK has been so widely and so justly condemned, that if what is alleged in her petition, now before us, to the Judge of the District Court can be proved, she may be allowed to have had better provocation. Nothing, of course, would warrant her behavior; but in all charity we must admit there was something to excite it. She is accused of having assaulted the lady now recognized by Mr. HOLBROOK as his wife, and to have tried to kill her. After inflicting some bad, but not dangerous wounds, she proceeded to smash the furniture of the house with an ax. She thus did damage to the extent of thousands of dollars. Her arrest followed, and she was committed to prison. Subsequently she was released on bail, and has now brought suit for divorce against Mr. HOLBROOK, who, on the other hand, claims to have been already divorced from her.

The order made by the Judge of the District Court on her petition shows that he thinks she has at least a tenable case. Judge LEAUMONT directs that Mrs. BRONSON-HOLBROOK shall be allowed to bring and prosecute the suit; that she shall be authorized to live in the house in Constance-street, the scene of her late extraordinary proceeding; that she shall be allowed alimony sufficient to keep her and her husband shall be enjoined from disposing of the community property existing between them, and that an inventory and appraisal shall be affected of the same. This order by no means necessarily affects the ultimate disposition of the case; but it certainly warrants the suggestion that the business is not quite so one-sided as at first it appeared. But further curious facts are now made public. Mrs. BRONSON-HOLBROOK's petition says that the decree of divorce granted Mr. HOLBROOK shall be declared null and void. Thus she recognizes the existence of such a decree, which, of course, is a technical justification of the present marital relation of Mr. HOLBROOK and the lady last recognized as his wife. Now, Judge LEAUMONT makes his order in distinct view of the disclosure in Mrs. BRONSON-HOLBROOK's petition of the existence of this decree. The ground for his proceeding is plain and simple, but is likely to lead to puzzling complications. The petitioner alleges that she never had lawful notice of the suit for divorce instituted, and pleads this in support of her action of nullity, and on the strength of this the Judge made his order.

The singular feature about the case as it stands is that, supposing the disputed decree to be maintained, the strange spectacle will be presented of a woman suing for a divorce from a man who is not her husband, and compelling him meanwhile not only to give up his house to her use, but to supply her with money to live comfortably in it during the action. This seems hard, but Mrs. BRONSON-HOLBROOK's plea against the validity of the decree, if true, is sound. She alleges that she was in the North, on a visit, when the decree was procured, that it was procured without her knowledge, and that on her return to her house in Constance-street she found a young lady, who been accustomed to visit at the house, living there without her permission. This is the lady now acknowledged by Mr. HOLBROOK as his wife, and the one upon whom the assault was made as described. We do not dwell upon the many allegations of ill-treatment made against Mr. HOLBROOK by his original partner, or of her charges that he has alienated property common to both. These are matters to be established or confuted by evidence, and pending its production need not be discussed. It is right, however, to give publicity to the fact that Mrs. BRONSON-HOLBROOK contests the decree of divorce, and that the Judge seems to hold that she has grounds to go upon in so doing.

Our arrangements for the first picnic are nearly completed. It is proposed to take at least four hundred children from the Five Points to Rockaway Beach, under the care of Mr. BARNARD, the Superintendent of the House of Industry, assisted by the teachers. Several of the mothers of these children will also be taken along, and an excellent luncheon provided for all. A force of policemen will also accompany the picnic party. The children will be given full liberty for play and games, and they will sing their school songs and glees. We may be able to take some music, which will add to the pleasures of the day. Now that the picnic movement has been fairly entered upon, we trust the public will respond liberally in order that the seven excursions already projected may be successfully carried out.

It turns out that the "insult to the American flag," offered by the Dominion authorities, in the case of the James Bliss, of which the New-York Bulletin made such elaborate use, was the result of a mistake on the part of a subordinate officer. This is now known on the authority of the commander of the schooner, who believes it was the duty of the authorities to seize his vessel, and who declares he was very kindly treated throughout.

The list of fatal casualties at Coney Island Beach is now opened, and will be indefinitely extended during the season. On the 4th a young swimmer got beyond his depth, and was drowned. Nothing could be done to aid him, for the preparations for such occurrences are mere delusions, calculated to give a false sense of security, but singularly inadequate for a sudden emergency. If bathers at Coney Island cannot arrange to inform the proprietors of the bath-houses a few hours in advance of any accident about to occur, they had better stay away. Under no other circumstances can they expect to be properly cared for.

The clever writer who acts the part of Courier de Paris to the admirable Journal Universel of Paris, has some pertinent hints on the Grand Prix. After giving vent to the sentiment—"If we had only experienced such defeat [illegible]—he proceeds to refute the commonplace of racing, and following the best of French opinion, points out that the gambling effects of horse-racing are just as bad as those at the table. M. AUMERANDE, after enumerating the enormous losses of racing men, refers to the fact that the stream has in proportion to her means as much as his master—a fact in which the suicide of Lord ZETLAND's groom, on account of that lord's losses, gives point. In conclusion, he states that a tremendous row took place at Mabille on the evening of the Grand Prix, when there was a general smash of mirrors, furniture, and soubrets, ending by the honnêtes dames of France and England being forcibly ejected. "And this all through a couple of horses!"

A few months ago a famous Prussian General was inspecting some military stables. "What do I see there?" he said, in tones of thunder, to a Sergeant. "Cobwebs!" "Yes, Sir," was the respectful reply, "we keep them there to catch the flies and prevent their tormenting the horses." Let us go and do likewise. Let every house-maid be instructed to let alone the cobwebs—indeed, many of our Housemaids "helps" need very little instruction on this head—and to regard the spider as a beneficent friend to man and the enemy of his enemies, the fly.

The opening of Church-street, between Fulton-street and the Battery, was sufficiently completed nine months ago to admit of putting down a decent pavement. Yet there has been no attempt made to have this very necessary work done from that time up to the present. The street has been gradually getting more and more impassable, until it is now so full of deep holes as to render traffic in it especially dangerous after dark. So far, the value of the improvement cannot be fairly estimated, owing to the carmen's disinclination to run the risk of breaking springs and laming their horses for the sake of making a short-cut to save five or ten minutes. Commissioner VAN NORT might find useful employment for one of his inspectors in preparing a report on the actual condition of this Church-street extension, with the view of having it paved without further delay.

The Democratic Convention and its Leading Spirits—The Delegates to Baltimore—The Canvass.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

JACKSON, MISS., FRIDAY, JUNE 28, 1872.

The so-called Democratic Conservative State Convention adjourned yesterday evening at 6 o'clock, after a turbulent session of about seven hours. Only forty out of seventy counties were "represented" at all, and a large part of them by self-constituted "delegates." The controlling spirits present were McCardle, alias McArdle, of the McCardle case, whose notoriety, like that of Dred Scott, is purely adventitious, and Lewis, Barksdale, Frantz and Horne, editors of obscene Democratic newspapers. You will remember that in 1862, the Confederate States Congress was bulged by the resignation of such men as Toombs, Wise and others, for the purpose of going into the army, and that thenceforth that body was contemptible in the eyes of the world for its want of both capacity and courage. Barksdale, and A. G. Brown, and J. W. C. Watson were among the remaining members who passed the Conscript law, forcing all the boys and old men who were not "Congressmen," or who did not own as many as fifteen slaves, to go into the army to fight the battles of slavery. The latter last named, added to the editors aforesaid, had complete control of the Convention. One of the worthies I have named, Horne, is editor of the Mercury, a vile sheet issued at Meridian, a place that, one year ago, was the scene of the massacre of some twelve or fifteen colored men and women in cold blood. This man Horne is now under indictment for his crimes against the colored race. He was one of the leading spirits of the Convention. He is a leading Greeley man, and a delegate from the State at large to the Baltimore Convention. Of course Grant fared badly in such hands. If they could have got hold of him, all of them together and he alone, at any time within the last twelve hours, I am certain they would have effected a change in the Presidential office. As it was, they only accused him of all sort of personal infamy and villainy.

DELEGATES TO BALTIMORE.

The following list of delegates was selected: Principals—J. W. C. Watson, of Marshall, a Confederate Congressman after it was branded; E. Barksdale, of Hinds, another of the same class, except that he has no ability except as a political trickster; J. H. Sharpe, of Lowndes, Confederate General and an amiable gentleman; A. G. Horne, of Lauderdale, K. K. editor, indicted under United States Enforcement act.

Alternates—W. S. Featherston, of Marshall, Ex-Congressman and Confederate General; S. S. Calhoon, of Madison, a young gentleman of ability and promise; H. M. Street, of Prentiss, Democratic member of State Legislature; George Wood, of Jackson County, unknown.

THE CANVASS.

The canvass in this State, so far as white votes are concerned, will turn mainly upon the question of liberality, or rather the question of illiberality, to the late rebels. Upon the one hand it is said that Grant has been and is exceedingly little, malignant and pusillanimous toward us, and that Greeley, though never generous or magnanimous to anybody, promises largely for the future. But there are many who claim that Grant is at least just, and ready to be magnanimous if the Southerners will only give him a fair opportunity. SOUTHRON.

The Alleged Insult to the Stars and Stripes—Letter from the Captain of the James Bliss.

QUEBEC, July 5.—The following letter from the master of the schooner James Bliss, is published:

To the Editor of the Morning Chronicle:

SIR: I have noticed in different papers remarks regarding an insult said to have been made against the United States flag by Commander Lechance, of the Dominion cutter Stella Marie, who seized the schooner James Bliss, of which I am master, for fishing within the prescribed limits. I acknowledge that laboring under the impression that the treaty was settled and all restrictions removed, I was found fishing in Canadian waters. In justice to Commander Lechance I must say that while performing what I suppose was his duty he has treated me kindly and like a gentleman. This treatment I have also received in Quebec from Mr. Gregory and Mr. Tilton, of the Department at Ottawa, whom I met at Mr. Gregory's office at Quebec. Regarding the turning down of the cabin part of the American flag when the Dominion flag was put at the masthead, I firmly believe this was done through the mistake or simple ignorance of the second officer left in charge of the prize, Commander Lechance not being on board at the time.

(Signed.) AILEAN MCISAAC,
Master of Schooner James Bliss.

THE EDGAR STEWART CASE.

The American Guard on the Steamship at Aspinwall—The Life of the Vice-Consul Threatened.

ALBANY, July 5.—The United States Consul at Aspinwall, now here on a visit, has received advices from the Vice-Consul to the effect that there is no change in the Edgar Stewart matter. Notwithstanding the positive order issued by the Governor of Panama, that the American force on board the Stewart should be removed as early as possible, the forces remain, and will continue to do so. Great efforts have been made by the Panama authorities to get control of the vessel, but the Vice-Consul stands firmly against these efforts. His life has been threatened, but he has notified the authorities that he will defend himself with arms against any attack made upon him.

Mr. PERRY, the Consul, will leave for his Consulate on the next steamer.

A NEW MOVE IN ERIE.

Mr. Vanderbilt to be President, with Full Power.

The New-York Central to be Consolidated with it.

The People at the Mercy of a Monopoly—The English Stockholders Cared for Last—The Commodore Said to Be their Choice.

The extraordinary and erratic fortunes of the Erie Railroad ever since it was first organized by its originator have been equaled in the history of no other corporation in this country, or, indeed, in the world. It was a bold conception to tunnel through the mountains, build a way along the beetling cliffs, and stretch an iron track from the Metropolis of the New World direct to the waters of the lake from which the road derives its name. There were romantic physical obstacles to be overcome before the work was completed, but the financial difficulties were even greater. There have been attempts on Erie by other roads, and Erie has almost often become the assailant. The road was built with the avowed intention of supplying a second route from the West to the Metropolis, and during evil and good report, whether paying or not, it has afforded a channel by which freight and passengers might pass at a cheap rate, and without being impoverished by the payment of the high prices imposed by a monopoly. The history of the coup d'état of the 11th of last March is yet fresh in the minds of the people. It will be remembered that after the death of Fisk a meeting was held by a Board of the Erie Directors to take measures for the ousting of Jay Gould from the Presidency of the corporation. English stockholders were at the bottom of this movement to dethrone Gould, and were assisted by Gen. Sickles and S. L. M. Barlow, together with George Couch. The movement was successful, and Gen. Dix was chosen President in place of Jay Gould, while Mr. W. W. Sherman was appointed Treasurer; and Mr. O. H. P. Archer, Vice-President. These latter gentlemen entered upon their duties as officers of the road, and were supported by the English stockholders, who immediately began to buy up the stock in the States, through their agents, and ship it to England. The stock rose rapidly, and fortunes were made and lost in Wall-street in a day. For a time, under various rumors and amid prevailing uncertainty, its value fluctuated rapidly, but lately it has been more settled. The English stockholders, once achieving their victory, have been casting about for expedients to give the stock a value which it has had recently only by reason of their extensive purchases. There has been one fact before them, viz.: The New-York Central Railroad being the only opposition line, if it could swallow Erie, or Erie it, a monopoly would be formed controlling all the carrying business from the West to the Northern seaboard. A consolidation of New-York Central and Erie, however, was hardly to be thought of, for obvious reasons. But finally, it is reported, the stockholders have hit upon a solution of the difficulty, which was no less than to seek the present board of officers, and tender the Presidency of the road to Cornelius Vanderbilt. The question was discussed at a meeting of the English stockholders in London a fortnight ago, and as a consequence offers were made to Mr. Vanderbilt, the tenor of which is stated above. Mr. Vanderbilt is understood to have replied that he would accept the Presidency on condition of having absolute control, with power to do what he wished and thought needful for the welfare of the road. An agreement was thereupon entered into, that at the ensuing election, which will take place in a few days, Mr. Vanderbilt shall receive the votes of the English stockholders, which are now amply sufficient to control it, and that on the other hand, the road shall pass into his hands, and together with the New-York Central form a monopoly of the carrying trade from the West to New-York. The tariffs will be raised immediately after the election, and the Erie and New-York Central Roads run practically as one corporation. This arrangement has been entered into as no experiment, but as a permanent affair, and yesterday the agents of the English stockholders made further extensive purchases of stock in consequence of the acceptance by Commodore Vanderbilt of the presidency of the road, the price advancing three per cent. Commodore Vanderbilt will also make changes in every way of the regulations and appurtenances of the road. Today will be lively at the Stock Exchange.

AMUSEMENTS.

Musical.

THE BAND OF THE GRENADIER GUARDS.

The band of the English Grenadier Guards, under the direction of Mr. Dan Godfrey, gave at the Academy of Music, last evening, the only concert in which they are to take part previous to returning to London. Their departure for England will be effected today. It could hardly be attended with brighter memories than yesterday's incidents must have created. A larger audience could not have been packed into the Academy than filled it last night to bid the band an almost simultaneous welcome and farewell, and no vocal or instrumental performance could possibly elicit a more enthusiastic display of gratification than was shown from the interpretation of the first to that of the last number of the programme. No recital by a brass band could be more justly deserving of such honors than that of Mr. Godfrey's men. The perfection of the solos, in point of intonation, tone, beauty and eloquence of phrasing, and precision in the most rapid as in the slowest passages, was scarcely more productive of admiration than the faultless accompaniments supplied to them. In fact, the quality of this part of the band's work commended it most strongly to the critical listener. Crescendos and diminuendos, swelling and dying away in exquisite sympathy with the breathings of the prominent instrument, marvellous arpeggios, and rare effects wrought by the drums, were a few of the many minutiæ of the playing of the band which no doubt gave to persons of experience in such matters, the liveliest pleasure. The excellence of the accompaniments as support to the voices intrusted with the themes must have been apparent to every one. Mr. Godfrey's musicians proved by last evening's efforts that they could sustained with success a chorus of one hundred voices, or subdue their might so furnishing the base for the warble of a bird. The impressiveness of their execution was equally clear. The brio of the festal music in "Rigoletto" and "La Traviata," the airy lightness of "E scherzo" in "Il Ballo," the compass of the dance tunes in "Il Profeta," the severe grandeur of the bars from the scene of the benediction of the swords in "Gli Ugonotti," and the finest grace of "Ombra leggiera" in "Dinorah," were in turn illustrated with the same unvarying fidelity. Though the solos were exceedingly fine, they could not but be of slight interest when compared with the results of the united endeavors of sixty men, informed with a common mind, and skilled as executants in the very highest degree. It would not be an easy task to select for mention a few of the selections of the concert as particularly worthy of praise. The overtures to "Der Freyschutz," and to "Rob Roy"—the latter by Sir H. Bishop—two potpourris of operatic airs, a variety of national melodies, two of Mr. Godfrey's waltzes and Frewin's "Excelsior Polka" formed the larger portion of the bill. The cornet solos were contributed by Mr. McGrath, who has firmness, purity, and vigor, and by Mr. Ellis. A clarionet solo—a series of variations, and a very brilliant one—was done by Mr. [illegible]

[illegible] is astonishing. Mr. Boo's management of the concertina, in "Recollections of Scotland," quite substituted that contemned contrivance, and the same gentleman's use of the piccolo, in an after solo also decided unexpected resources in the smaller flute. It only remains for us to say that all the pieces were redemanded, that "The Star Spangled Banner" and the British anthem were heard time and again amid an uproarious demonstration of delight, and that the entertainment was not terminated until a late hour.

A PRECIOUS LOT.

What is Going On at Chickering's—Is the American Club a Political Society?

The American Club intend opening their hotel at Indian Harbor today, when animated champagne and other costly liquors will no doubt be consumed. The fall of the Tammany Ring last year it was supposed destroyed the American Club with all the other Ring establishments, but it has recently gained new life. The American Club-house is just as handsomely fitted up today as in the days of the Ring, and there are quite as many Ring politicians connected with the Club. The "Rubin Gang," a noted Sixth Ward organization, has an elaborately fitted up apartment, ostensibly to be used with in the house of a millionaire. The President's and Vice-Presidents' bedroom floors are covered with tapestry carpets made expressly by European looms, supposed only to be employed in work for decorating royal mansions, and the furniture of these rooms and their parlor is of the most extravagant character. The pictures, although somewhat of a Neuritious style, are richly painted and more gorgeously framed, and the vases, bronzes and other ornaments are palatial in their style and extravagance. The Secretary's bed-chamber must have cost a fortune, as money has not been spared, it being rather lavish expenditure for a Police Court clerk. The band-master's room is not so extravagantly fitted up, but yet more money is here expended than would be deemed necessary in any ordinary sleeping-room. Other members' rooms are furnished in like manner, the peculiar taste of the occupant being shown in the pictures, lace-work, &c. One bed was covered with a counterpane of blue silk and white lace, and another with a material equally as extravagant. In the main drawing-room the furniture is very elaborate, one table being made of several thousand pieces of inlaid work. The bronze ornaments are very costly, as also the frames of the pictures. The library is anything but well stocked, being composed principally of sensational novels; but the immense supply of French glasses of all kinds proves that if the mental faculties are not cultivated, that of the appetite is not forgotten. The facilities for cooking are sufficient to furnish the table for hundreds with the most tempting delicacies. Bluffs for game and other dinners are not only profuse in the dining-room, but are also located in every member's bed-chamber. Conveniences are furnished for billiards, draw-poker, or anything else of this kind that might be desired. Extravagance everywhere.

"And who paid for all this?" would naturally be asked by members." It cannot be possible. Tens of thousands of dollars expended for fitting up single rooms, and some of the members own yachts that also cost thousands. And yet there is no evidence that any of the members are in receipt of an honest income that could support so extravagant an outlay. Even the President of the United States would be accused of wilfully wasting the people's money if he were to fit up even at his own expense the White House in the style that some of these rooms at the American Club-house are furnished. But not only has the place been thus equipped at a heavy cost, but the maintenance corps is a very large one. All the Summer a hundred attendants at least have to be always on hand, for there is no knowing on what day a crowd of members and guests may arrive, and it is not always easy to hire extra help. A corps of boat and yacht hands have to be kept up, so that the members may go out for a trip at full or two-hour pleasure, all this to be up by dues and initiations. But who can afford to pay them? Five hundred dollars for initiation, two hundred dollars a year for dues, thousands of dollars for fitting up a room, and thousands for a yacht; besides assessments for every conceivable kind of thing that may be suggested in the shape of wines, fire-works, &c. Any ordinary legitimate income could not support such extravagance—that is very clear. Then where does the money come from?

The members say the Club is not a political organization. Perhaps a few of the members do not hold office, but they do a great amount of secret political work. The recent exposures of the Ring have brought a few names prominently forward, and we now take the roll of membership of the American Club, from which we select the following names.

William M. Tweed, the "Boss."

Charles H. Hall, Judge Hogan's Confidential Clerk.

John Scott, Police Justice and Park Stone Contractor.

Edward J. Shandley, Police Justice.

James M. Macgregor, Superintendent of Buildings.

Walter Roche, Bank Defaulter.

Andrew J. Garvey, Court-house Plasterer.

Patrick H. Keenan, Coroner.

Joseph Shannon, Clerk to Common Council.

Terence Farley, Ex-Alderman.

Owen W. Brennan, Commissioner of Charities, and assignee on Sheriff Brennan's lease of Monroe Hall.

Eugene Durnin, Ex-Assistant Alderman.

Charles G. Cornell, Ex-Senator, and Fugleman at Department of Works.

Edwin M. Haggerty, Indicted Voucher-thief.

Edward Hogan, Police Justice.

James H. Ingersoll, Court-house Chair-maker.

Morgan Jones, Political Plumber.

Joseph B. Young, False-voucher Plotter; Ex Clerk to Supervisors.

Cornelius Corson, Tweed's Lieutenant.

P. Barter, Political Bribee.

Edward Cuddy, Ex-Alderman.

John McB. Davidson, the Ring Safe-man.

John B. Keyser, Ring Stove-dealer.

James Ryan, Attaché of Special Sessions.

Michael J. Shandley, Police Clerk for his Brother.

Isaac J. Oliver, Political Printer.

John T. McGowan, Police Clerk.

Henry D. Feiter, Saloon-keeper.

John F. Chamberlain, well-known.

Chris. O'Connor, Billiard-player.

Alexander Frear, Commissioner of Emigration.

Jay Gould, Erie Ring man.

Thomas Kirkpatrick, Badge-jeweler for the Ring.

Charles E. Loew, County Clerk.

Reeves E. Holmes, Bowling-green Savings Bank, with Walter Roche.

Thomas C. Fields, Ring Assemblyman.

James J. Slevin, Ring; Deputy Sheriff.

John Garvey, Court-house Plasterer's Brother.

John M. Carpenter, Ring Health Officer.

Matthew T. Brennan, Sheriff.

James W. Collier, Saloon-keeper.

James E. Coulter, Police Justice.

Gunning S. Bedford, City Judge.

George G. Barnard, Impeached Supreme Court Judge.

Augustus Funk, Militia General.

William Schirmer, Coroner.

Joseph Koch, Civil Justice.

Thomas Canary, Mike Norton's Stable partner.

Richard O'Gorman, Corporation Counsel.

William Hutchinson, Fire Commissioner.

Thomas J. Creamer, Ex-Senator.

Richard M. Tweed, the Boss' son.

William M. Tweed, Jr., the Boss' son.

Martin B. Brown, Ex-Fire Commissioner.

And a number of other smaller fry whose known incomes would not pay their current expenses at the Club.

The Young Men's Republican Associations.

A new political element, who promises to be of considerable local prominence in the present campaign, is the organization (now steadily progressing) of Young Men's Republican Associations in the various Assembly Districts of the City. The object is to band together the Republican young men, principally those not connected with the regular associations into a solid phalanx for duty during the campaign. The directing power will be a central committee composed of delegates from each district association.

As the work of conducting the elections has principally to be performed by the young men, it is seen how important it is that they should be united in purpose and aims, and the necessity of a central body is obvious.

It is also proposed that the Young Men's Associations work as auxiliaries to the regular district associations, and these latter through the medium of the former will doubtless be largely recruited with earnest, energetic young men, the element that does the hard work in politics.

In all but a few Assembly districts associations are already formed and delegates elected to a central committee, and the completion of the work is only delayed until these remaining districts, four in number, are organized.

The German Reformers.

The Central Committee of the German Reform organizations, Mr. Oswald Ottendorfer presiding, held a regular meeting at Beethoven Hall last night, when resolutions referring to patronage, submitted by a subcommittee of the Executive Committee, was referred back to the Executive Committee. The report complains of the extension of German applicants from employment in the Departments of Public Works and Parks.

SOLDIERS AND SAILORS' CONVENTION.

Address to the Soldiers and Sailors of the Late War by the Veterans' National Committee.

The following address has been issued by the Veterans' National Committee, calling for a general convention of the soldiers and sailors who served in the Union Army and Navy during the late war:

HEAD-QUARTERS VETERANS' NATIONAL COMMITTEE, FIFTH-AVENUE HOTEL, NEW-YORK CITY, July 5, 1872.

To the Soldiers and Sailors who served in the Union Army and Navy during the late war:

COMRADES: The undersigned, a committee appointed for the purpose by a meeting of veterans from all sections of the country, who were assembled in Philadelphia upon the 8th day of June, in attendance upon the Republican National Convention, and which meeting unanimously resolved to abide by and support the nominations of said Convention, hereby invite you to meet in same convention at Pittsburg, Penn., on the 15th day of September, 1872, for the purpose of expressing our unreserved belief that the destinies of the country for the ensuing four years should be under the protection of men who never faltered in the hour of our country's greatest danger. We believe that men should be placed in high positions of state who in the hour of our greatest peril gave that intellect, personal reputation, and personal faith in the justness of our cause, which was necessary to save the country, and place us in the position we now occupy.

We congratulate ourselves upon the fact that the Government, during the past three and one-half years, has been administered by one of our comrades, who has shown wonderful civil capacity in aiding in the reduction of the public debt, in conducting our foreign affairs with great skill, so that we now stand at peace with the whole world, and in preserving peace in sections of our country where sentiments were entertained calculated to disturb the reorganization of the States lately in rebellion. We have full faith in him as a peaceful man, because, had he felt disposed to exercise his power as a personal governor, he would have done it while nearly a million of men were in arms and under his command, instead of aiding, as he did, the rapid reduction of the army to a peace footing. We believe him to be honest, capable and courageous.

We believe that it will be a source of pleasure to all who battled for the Union to meet once more and revive the memories of our old campaigns.

We believe that an expression of the feelings and opinions of those who defended the nation on land and sea would at this time be most opportune.

We believe that such an expression would be regarded by all right-thinking men as one proper for its leader, and that it would be productive of the most beneficial results.

We believe that our comrades universally desire that such measures shall prevail as will secure the greatest possible happiness and prosperity of the whole people.

We believe that our country's old defenders are actuated by no partisan or factious motives, but are moved by a desire to subserve the interest of public men and measures, and the elevation and purification of our institutions.

We believe that while all the old veterans are loyalists in the extreme, and utterly opposed to any doctrine which would tend in the slightest degree to revive the heresy of secession, that they are desirous of extending charity and forgiveness to all of our former enemies in the field who now recognize or who may hereafter recognize the great wrong that they have done to our country.

Believing as we do that great good will result from the meeting proposed, we most cordially and earnestly invite our comrades throughout the country to meet with us at Pittsburg on the tenth anniversary of the battle of Antietam, Sept. 17, 1872.

Let us come together again as we did in 1861, sinking all partisan differences, take our stand now as then for our country, and, before and beyond all else, labor for her honor and glory.

Fraternally yours,

Gen. A. H. BURNSIDE, Chairman.

L. E. DUDLEY, Secretary.

Gen. POWELL CLAYTON,	Gen. DANIEL WOODALL,
Gen. GEO. E. SPENCER,	Gen. CHARLES M. HAMILTON,
Col. JAMES CORT,	Gen. LOUIS C. WAGNER,
Gen. R. J. GOLEBRY,	Gen. C. H. T. COLLIS,
Gen. SOL. D. MEREDITH,	Gen. A. L. PEARSON,
Gen. GRANVILLE M. DODGE,	Capt. A. W. KORRS,
Lieut.-Col. E. J. HISTON,	Gen. CHARLES R. BRAYTON,
Gen. JOHN M. HARLAN,	Gen. JAMES DAVIDSON,
Gen. J. L. CHAMBERLAIN,	Capt. BARBOUR LEWIS,
Gen. GILBERT CONRAD,	Capt. W. G. VEABEY,
Gen. N. P. BANKS,	Capt. W. H. H. STOWELL,
Gen. E. W. HINKS,	Col. JAMES P. PLATT,
Gen. JOSEPH R. HAWLEY,	Gen. J. H. DUFFALD,
Gen. JAS. H. VAN ALEN,	Gen. LUCIUS FAIRCHILD,
Gen. F. W. SWIFT,	Col. JAMES LEWIS,
Gen. J. T. AVERILL,	Gen. JOSEPH C. ABBOTT,
Major G. C. FRENCH,	Gen. R. F. NOYES,
B. B. CAHOON,	Gen. JAMES S. NEGLEY,
Gen. A. M. DENNISON,	Gen. ED. MCCOOK,
Gen. A. F. STEVENS,	Gen. N. P. CHIPMAN,
Gen. WM. WARD,	Major JOS. W. HOUSTON,
Gen. S. L. WOODFORD,	Gen. B. F. POTTS,
Gen. F. C. BARLOW,	Col. WM. BREEDEN,
	Gen. GEO. A. MAXWELL,
	Gen. J. A. CAMPBELL.

All soldiers and sailors who approve the objects of this call are requested to communicate with the Committee at the Fifth-avenue Hotel, New-York City.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT.

Address of Hon. Schuyler Colfax at Kalamazoo—The Perils Our Country Should Avoid.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., July 5.—Vice-President Colfax was the orator of the day at the celebration in this city yesterday. After speaking of the Fourth of July as our jubilee day, when patriotism enables us to say that we are all Democrats and Republicans, he remarked that our thoughts naturally turned at such time to the glories of the past and present of our nation, but that we should also improve the occasion to contemplate and resolve to guard against the possible perils of the future.

He quoted the striking contrast of the great Spanish Republican Castelar, in which he classes Asia as the continent of the past, with its theocracies, and East Europe as the continent of the present, with its conflict between ancient and modern ideas; while he hails America as the continent of the future, preserving the equilibrium between stability and progress, and harmony between liberty and democracy, destined to be the grandest civilization of all. It is idle to talk of danger from evil from without and within.

Mr. Colfax enumerated as some of the possible perils of the Republic: First, overtrading abroad, now settled by Government, State and railroad bonds, ultimately, however, to be paid, principal and interest, in American gold, and that actions, like individuals, should live within their means; second, The building of and going into debt abroad for too many railroads; third, increasing the State and municipal debt, rendering local taxation far more burdensome than the national, notwithstanding our heavy war debt; fourth, increasing the power of great corporations, which should be wisely exercised, especially as to "watering" stock, except by express legislative authority, as it rendered higher charges on the public necessary to make dividends; fifth, that corruption, whenever clearly discovered in national, State or municipal government, should be sternly punished as a greater crime than petty embezzlement or theft; sixth, the expansion of area, it it brings with it unwilling people or national hostilities, and unless, like marriage, with the hearty assent of both peoples; seventh, war, except as a last resort; and he meant by that not the avenging of some fanciful wrong, but the preservation of the national life, as bloodshed is justified by the preservation of individual life. He stated that many regarded centralization as one of the national perils; but that depended on what the speaker meant by centralization. For himself, he believed that a Government was only worth its necessary cost all thrown to the governed, and when it secured and insured protection to its people, protection abroad, protection at home, protection of its existence from domestic or foreign foes. He closed by commenting on the extraordinary developments and grand possibilities of our nation, extending from the capes of Florida to the Behring Strait and the Arctic Ocean, and said the truest test of wise and beneficent legislation for our forty millions of people was that given by God himself to Moses: "There shall be but one manner of law for him that is born among you and for the stranger."

Mr. Colfax seemed in excellent spirits, and alluded to the fact that he was not any more a candidate for office, giving the appearance of one who felt his freedom and independence.

Personal.

Commodore W. E. LeRoy, of the United States Navy, and Judge Thomas Allen Clarke, of New-Orleans, are at the New-York Hotel. Judge J. D. Abbott, of Boston, is at the Brevoort House. Gen. A. T. Simpson, of Denver, and Judge R. H. Johnson, of Pittsburg, are at the Sturtevant House. Gov. John T. Hoffman and Gen. John C. Fremont, of Tarrytown, Geo. Gray, of Japan, John J. Kelly and G. Lothbridge, of Shanghai, China, are at the Clarendon Hotel. Hon. F. R. Hinckley, of Chicago, Rev. Joun Hutchinson, of New-York, Dr. Edward Bishop, of London, England, Lieut.-Gov. A. C. Burch, of Watertown, are at the St. Nicholas Hotel. Wm. H. Barnum, of Connecticut, H. A. Richmond, of Boston, Col. H. W. Woolley, of Louisville, and Colonel W. Wood, of Plattsburg, are at the Fifth-avenue Hotel.

WASHINGTON.

Political in Washington—The Signal Office—Chief Cor—Army and Navy Orders.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—The Greeleyites are quoting the utterances of every recruit, no matter how mean his calibre, because their recruits from the Republican ranks are few and far between. Below is an extract from a letter from Wisconsin, which shows how the case stands in that State at the present time. The writer is an able Republican, with the coolest and most dispassionate judgment, and never given to overrating his own party's strength or underrating that of the enemy:

COLUMBUS, Wis., June 28, 1872.

I am both surprised and gratified at the state of political sentiment I find here on my return. Unless something occurs hereafter to change the character of the opposition, Grant will carry Wisconsin by from thirty to forty thousand. A portion of the Democratic Party, mainly the war element, together with the younger class of politicians, are for Greeley, and quite a number, too; but the old, sober Democrats are sour and disgusted, and take little or no stock in the attempt to put the party under the lead of Horace Greeley. Even the silly cry, "Anybody to beat Grant," has to muzzle in it to their chin. They are not so crazy to beat Grant as to save to beat themselves by accepting what is, You know, the time Democrats on every corner declare they will vote for Grant sooner than Greeley. It is my deliberate judgment that if the election were to occur to-morrow, Gen. Grant would get two Democratic votes for every Republican he would lose in Wisconsin.

INTERESTING TO VISITORS.

One of the places of interest to visitors in Washington is the Head-quarters of the Signal Service Bureau. The Capitol, the National Museum at the Smithsonian Institution, and the Model Room at the Patent Office have been for a long period the earliest and principal resorts of sight-seeing strangers. The home of "old probabilities" is becoming almost as famous, and is likely to be as much frequented. Since the new rooms for the observer's instruments were fitted up and occupied last Winter, they have been open under proper regulations, to visitors and some one of the pleasant and courteous gentlemen employed there will always explain the curious meteorological instruments and their uses, and the manner of observation. The rooms are nicely carpeted, and kept in perfect order. The instruments for the most part are inclosed in glass cases. The comparison which the Bureau has been able to make of the operation of various kinds of instruments, and the competitive tests made or now making promises to bring about great improvements. Already an instrument for registering the velocity and direction of the wind, invented by Lieut. Gibbons, an officer connected with the Bureau, has been adopted for the signal stations as being better adapted to the purposes than other instruments now constructed. Preparations are progressing for the establishment of a station of observation on Pike's Peak, and a sergeant will soon be dispatched.

DEATH OF THE ASSISTANT LIBRARIAN.

Mr. C. H. W. Meehan, Assistant Librarian of the Library of Congress, in charge of the Law Department, died suddenly of apoplexy this morning. Mr. Meehan had been employed at the Library with satisfaction to its patrons for many years. Ainsworth Spofford was Librarian of the Congressional Library several years ago.

SUNSET COX.

Hon. S. S. Cox returned here today to recruit for a few days prior to the extraordinary feat which he has a prominent member of the Democracy, will be required to perform at Baltimore in swallowing Mr. Greeley. Mr. Cox is quite restored from his recent very severe illness, and will be able to endure everything in the approaching campaign except to see his own speeches made against Greeley when the latter was his competitor for Congress reproduced as a campaign document against his candidate for the Presidency.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

NAVAL ORDERS.

Assistant Surgeon J. F. Bransford has been ordered to the Naval Hospital at Philadelphia; Capt. J. C. Febiger has been detached from special duty and placed on waiting orders; Medical Inspector Henry O. Mayo has been detached, as Fleet Surgeon of the Asiatic Station, and granted one year's leave of absence; Surgeon Delaven, Bloodgood, from the Plymouth, and ordered as Fleet Surgeon of the Asiatic Station, to report July 20.

THE ARMY.

The following changes in the stations and duties of army engineer officers have been made: First Lieut. D. W. Lockwood is relieved from duty under the immediate orders of First Lieut. George M. Wheeler, and ordered to Detroit for duty under Major Cyrus B. Comstock; Second Lieut. Richard L. Hoxie is relieved from duty under orders of Col. H. W. Benham and ordered to report for duty under orders of Lieut. Wheeler upon explorations in Nevada and Virginia; Second Lieut. William D. Marshall is also ordered to duty upon explorations in Nevada and Arizona, under Lieut. Wheeler.

COLLECTOR AT NEWARK.

William A. Baldwin has been appointed Collector of Customs at Newark, N. J., vice William Silvey, deceased.

THE LABOR REFORMERS.

A Party of the Future—What the Leaders Propose to Do.

CHARLESTOWN, Mass., July 5.—At a labor meeting at Blacksmiths' and Machinists' Hall this evening, E. M. Chamberlain said that the call for a conference of the Labor Party in New-York July 20 was an endeavor to assemble those who believe that the only honest course for Labor Reformers to pursue was to support candidates who stand upon a platform embodying explicit measures for the benefit of labor; that, as neither Grant nor Greeley was the representative of a party of that idea, Labor Reformers could do for neither. If a movement was not inaugurated somewhere else to place a candidate upon a platform guaranteeing the enactment and execution of short-time laws, convertibility of the currency, direct, progressive taxation and minority representation, it remained in the power of the Labor Reformers to inaugurate the party of the future by making out-and-out working men's nominations; but that if danger was apprehended of being overslaughed by the adhesion of Grant and Greeley, nominations should be postponed and an endeavor made to keep the Labor Reformers organized to justify us both for action at a more favorable opportunity.

CUBA.

Another Rush of Wagers in the Stock of the Spanish Bank—Valmaseda's Resignation—Vacillating Slaughter of Cubans on Paper.

HAVANA, July 4.—The directors of the Spanish Bank have decided to raise the capital of the bank from six millions to eight millions. Numerous offers to subscribe to the new shares have been made. The rates of the Spanish Bank are quoted 234 per cent discount, and the indications are that there will be a further decline in their value.

The acceptance by the Spanish Government of the resignation of Capt.-Gen. Valmaseda causes much dissatisfaction among the residents of Cuba (Spaniards.)

The Cuban Major Fajardo, with twelve armed and sixteen unarmed followers, surrendered at Holguin. The formerly report of the Government announces that 186 Cubans have been killed, 238 captured, and 870 of all classes have surrendered. The Spanish loss is 3 killed, 22 wounded and 2 missed. The German corvettes Vineta and Gazelle, on the way from Kingston, Jamaica, to Norfolk, arrived off this port yesterday, and communicated with the German Consul at Havana.

A Lost Child—Freddy Leib.

Thirteen months ago Freddie Leib, aged five years, disappeared from the residence of his father, Prof. W. H. Leib, at Quincy, Ill. Since that time the sorrowing parents have sought for and wide for the boy, without much success until recently, when Mr. Leib learned that Freddy had been seen in Chicago, in company or company of an Italian minstrel. This leads to the supposition that the child had been stolen for the purpose of professional peculiarity. No further trace has been obtained of little Freddie, so Mr. Leib is now making a tour of the eastern cities in hopes of prosecuting a successful search. As the Italian musicians rendezvous in this City, it is believed that a clue may be gained better here than anywhere, so the friends of Prof. Leib have enabled him to offer a reward of $1,000 for the recovery of the child. Here is a case that should enlist the sympathies of every parent in New-York, and it is to be hoped that Mr. Leib will find his boy. Photographs of Freddie are now in the office of the Police Superintendent.

The following is a full description of the missing boy: Name, Freddie Leib; age, six years; stoutly built, dimples in chin and cheeks; blue eyes, dark brown hair, which curls when long; two cowlicks on top of head; where the hair separates from the forehead, with bald, and will doubtless remember that he has a little sister "Bessie" and a brother "Charlie."

AFFAIRS IN FRANCE.

The Liberation of the Territory—Prince Bismarck's Reply and President Thiers' Position—The Policy of the Executive—Attitude of the Assembly.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, June 21, 1872.

Nearly every day the few French dispatches given us in the French journals contain one or more paragraphs concerning the payment of the war indemnity and the liberation of French soil, and if two are given they are pretty sure to be contradictory. The dispatch of today denies that of yesterday, and gives the "real state of the case" only to be denied to-morrow. Several of the English correspondents have also lost their head as it is, and it is safe to presume that many of these telegrams have been sent to you by cable, at no small expense, and to no end but confusion. The matter which forms the basis of these speculations is very simple, and the real trouble lies not in what arrangement should be made or can be made, but in finding the means for carrying out any arrangement whatever. You can rest assured that Prince Bismarck is anxious to get in his money, and that he will make no difficulties to any reasonable proposition. The latest supposition which comes by the Havas agency from Versailles, is that Count Arnim has agreed to the evacuation of the remaining departments on condition that the French Government pays one milliard in cash before the 15th of December, and gives bankers' bills for two milliards more before the 15th of January, the Germans to hold Belfort and Toul until the bills have fallen due and are paid. There is a great deal more in this that the writers who explained it have supposed. I am of opinion that, so far from having raised difficulties or objections, Prince Bismarck has constantly encouraged the French Government in every one of its propositions. If he can get the money, either in cash or partly in approved paper, he will make no objection to a complete evacuation, and would be quite ready, in ten days after the payments were made, to take every man of his army across the frontier. But the other day, a partition of the indemnity was made among the different States of the Empire, and both officers and men are anxious to quit the hospitable soil of France.

THE PRESIDENT'S POSITION.

The troubles, however, are reserved for M. Thiers. One question, but not the great question, is the mode of raising this vast sum of money. Doubtless there is money enough in the country to cover a loan of this magnitude in a few days' time, if examined by Rothschild and others, and his only doubt is the amount of cash. Once entertained by the financial world. Since the difference with the Assembly, and the President's defeat by the radicals in the last elections, public confidence has been greatly shaken. Close upon the above proposition, sent out as a ballon d'essai from Versailles, came the report that the terms had been accepted, and that a loan would be put upon the market. Immediately the fall of the Bourse was startling, producing almost a panic, and the great banker hurried away to Versailles. What he told M. Thiers is not known exactly, but the current version is that the last elections have shown that, at the rate of progress now being made, it will take but a few months to give the radicals a victory throughout the country and make M. Gambetta the master of France. As this was too evident to need any demonstration, he had come, not to argue the matter with the President of the Republic, but to state the effect upon the world of finance, and was quite ready to say that a loan at this particular moment would be likely to prove disastrous. If the money was raised, the effect upon other values would be so great as to menace a crisis. In proof, M. Rothschild recalled the fact that before the elections, none of these reports had any effect upon the Bourse, while a simple rumor after these events, had sent nearly everything down about two per cent, an enormous fall for Continental markets. This same report goes on to say that M. Rothschild refused to say anything more, but insisted upon leaving the President to his own reflections. I am told that such was not the case, but that the banker advised M. Thiers to say nothing more about a loan until he had drawn nearer to the majority in the Chamber, in order to give hope that he would soon form a Ministry from that section, and oppose the Radicals; but, even then, he thought it better to negotiate first through the leading banking establishments of the world, in order to secure one-half or more before putting the loan upon the market. Doubtless this would cost something, but it was safe. In face of the certainty that the Radicals would carry the country in the elections for a new Assembly, it was nearly certain that foreign capitalists would hesitate to risk their money unless at an interest equal to that paid by Turkey and some of the uncertain South American Republics.

M. THIERS' POLICY.

These are M. Rothschild's views, such they will be pondered over in connection with other facts, although we may suspect a certain amount of private interest in the matter. But even the King of finance can say nothing which will change the opinion of M. Thiers. He is satisfied that he can raise the money, and were it to his interest to do so, he would not hesitate before the idea of private loss, or of the fall in values, provided it did not menace his Budget. M. Thiers would not shrink from carrying out his own ideas, let the consequences be what they may upon the money market, for he has in view the great question to which I have referred above. This is in reality the cause of all present difficulties. The Assembly has voted its own term of office, and defined its own powers. Elected to make peace with the Germans, peace cannot be considered as being complete until the soil is free and the conditions of the treaty carried out. But while this was voted, good case was taken not to vote the natural and logical consequence, and when the soil is free it may be that the Assembly will not regard its mandat at an end. M. Thiers does not dare go before the country with either the Bonapartists or the Radicals in a fair plebiscite, but he means to take his own time, work his own wires, bring on a conflict with the majority at a favorable moment, have everything prepared so that he can pay off the Germans in a week, declare the Assembly at an end, and then ask the country to sustain him by sending moderate Republicans to the second Assembly. This looks very much like a coup d'état; M. Thiers says it is simply une solution. This is why the semi-official Press and the Havas Agency is constantly supplied with rumors about the settlement, M. Thiers desiring, until he is quite ready, to keep up the idea that all sorts of objections come from the Germans.

ATTITUDE OF THE ASSEMBLY.

It is only within the past few days that the members of the Assembly have been impressed with the idea that this was the President's purpose. Naturally, the Right was thrown into a great state of alarm. The extreme Legitimists hold out their hands to the Bonapartists, believing this to be a move in the Orleans interest; the Bonapartists cry louder than ever for an appeal to the country and to universal suffrage freely exercised, pretending to submit to the result, whatever it may be. The members of M. Gambetta's party rub their hands in glee, feeling that the victory will surely be to them, and M. d'Haussonville writes a long letter to the Journal des Débats forgiving purpose of showing that the country is lost unless M. Thiers promptly goes over to the majority, and rules the country by it. The Centres made an attempt at fusion, and finally about one-third of the Chamber met at the house of M. Johnstone, the young member for the Gironde, and came to the conclusion to send a delegation to remonstrate with the President. Three Orleanist Dukes were selected as a commission, to which were added Changarnier and St. Marc de Girardin, but M. Thiers treated the party in the most off-hand way imaginable, and in reality sent them about their business. This was a point unprovided for, and when it became a question of rescinding the President's conduct the fusion broke up worse than ever, and in utter confusion the Orleanist Dukes went back to the support of M. Thiers—it is supposed by advice of the Duc d'Aumale. The inside fusionists are still in a great state of agitation, but it is extremely doubtful whether they can make any combinations which will last for more than a day, or whether party divisions can be forgotten long enough to exercise any pressure whatever upon M. Thiers. Now, the question will be, what is to be the result? That is more than uncertain. It looks now as if M. Thiers would be strongly roused by the Radicals. If a new Assembly were elected at this moment, it would have a solid majority of that party, voting upon the command of Gambetta, and the first conflict which came up between the Chamber and the Executive, would see that young gentleman voted into the Presidential chair. To conclude this review of French politics, I may remark that the three men last elected were claimed to be moderate Republicans by the Ministerial and other semi-official journals, but they have taken their seats on the extreme Left—upon the farthest end of the last benches—as not intended to show what their real feelings are and what their votes will be.

ASHBY.

NEW-ORLEANS.

The Fourth—Col. Scott and Col. Forney at the Cotton Exchange—The State General Committee.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NEW-ORLEANS, July 5.—The only celebration of the Fourth hereabouts was the sting of a national orator in Lafayette-square on Saturday and at noon. The Declaration of Independence was not read.

Col. T. A. Scott and Forney were interviewed by the merchants at the Cotton Exchange.

Capt. E. E. Pickard has been unanimously elected Secretary of the State General Executive Committee, with Mr. T. W. Bakkyne as Secretary. Our campaign begins in earnest next month.

Indictment of Kuklux in North Carolina.

From the Raleigh (N. C.) Era, July 4.

We are in possession of reliable information from head-quarters, that the national authorities are determined that Kuklexism shall be broken up in this and every other State, root and branch. If necessary, more troops will be sent to this State. Several hundred men—as many as two hundred in the County of Sampson—were indicted at the recent term of the United States Court in this city, for Kuklexism. No doubt other indictments in the Western District will be found against a great many Kuklux in several Western counties. The Government is convinced that its efforts to extirpate the infamous organization must be redoubled. Outrages by Kuklux will not be allowed to carry the election in 1872 as in 1870.

For prudential reasons, the names of the parties indicted are not made public. Twenty of the Sampson men are indicted for murder.

Pigeon-Shoot Between Bogardus and Kleinmann at Lincoln, Ill.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 5.—The pigeon-shooting match at Lincoln, Ill., yesterday, between Capt. A. H. Bogardus, of Elkhart, and Adolph Kleinmann, of this city—100 birds, single trap, Bogardus betting $500 to $400—res

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

No sales were made at the Exchange yesterday, Friday, July 5, and the market generally was unusually quiet. The sale at Long Branch, in charge of A. D. Mellick, Jr., & Bro., advertised for Wednesday, July 3, did not take place as announced, but was adjourned for two weeks. For today no auctions are projected. During next week, however, some little activity in business will prevail, for quite a number of legal sales will be consummated as the Exchange, a full list of which will be published on Monday. An important sale of suburban lots will also be held at Paterson, N. J., on Monday, by J. M. Phelps; and on Wednesday, July 10, A. D. Mellick, Jr., & Bro. will conduct a sale of lots at Fanwood, N. J., worthy of interest. At private contract, V. E. Stevenson & Son, No. 11 Pine-street, report having recently sold a plot of six lots, in size 200 by 76, on the west side of Ninth-avenue, forming the block front between Seventy-first and Seventy-second streets, for $55,000.

PROPOSALS.

UNITED STATES ENGINEER'S OFFICE,
THIRD STORY, UNION BANK BUILDING,
FAYETTE, STREET CHARLES-ST.
BALTIMORE, MD., July 1, 1872.

PROPOSALS WILL BE RECEIVED FOR dredging in the channel below Fort Carroll, leading to this city, known as the "Craighill Channel." The work will be between 200,000 and 300,000 cubic yards, but bids for smaller quantities will be considered.

The tide rises about one foot and one-half. Length of haul of material averages about two miles. Proposals will state the number of dollars to be paid for average quantity of cubic yards to be removed daily; price per cubic yard; including excavation, removal and deposit. Material to be measured in dumping scows.

Proposals to be sealed and in duplicate, indorsed on outside, accompanied by a copy of this advertisement, will be received until noon of the first day of July 1872, and will be opened in five minutes thereafter, in presence of such bidders as may wish to be present.

The right to reject any bid is reserved.

Specifications, forms of proposals and any desired information to be had on application at this office.

W. P. CRAIGHILL,
Major Engineers, U. S. A.

SEALED PROPOSALS WILL BE RECEIVED until the 23d day of July, 1872, at the office of the Supervising Architect, Treasury Department, Washington, D. C., for furnishing and delivering Rockaway Limestone, or other hard, durable stone, broken to the size of hens' eggs, suitable for concrete. The proposals to be accompanied by a sample of the stone.

Proposals will be made by the cubic yard, and will be received by weight; the weight of a yard to be ascertained by the Superintendent, by measuring accurately and weighing the same.

All bids must be made on the printed forms, to be obtained of the Supervising Architect, at Washington, or the Collector of Customs, Chicago, Ill., and will be accompanied by a postal bond in the sum of $5,000 that the bidder will accept and perform the contract, if awarded him.

All of the concrete stone needed will require to be delivered within forty days after the contract is entered into.

The right to reject any or all the bids is reserved.

Proposals must be inclosed in a sealed envelope and indorsed "Proposals for concrete stone, New Government Buildings, Chicago, Ill.," and addressed to

SUPERVISING ARCHITECT,
Treasury Department.

OFFICE OF THE WASHINGTON AQUEDUCT,

The delivery of the pipes to commence as soon as practicable, and to be completed by the 8th day of September, 1872.

Proposals will be received only on the printed forms, which, with plans, specifications, forms of contract, and any desired information can be had on application by mail, or in person to

O. E. BABCOCK,
Major of Engineers, Chief Engineer Washington Aqueduct.

PROPOSALS.

PROPOSALS FOR MAIL STEAM-SHIP SERVICE BETWEEN SAN FRANCISCO, JAPAN AND CHINA.

(POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, June 1, 1872.)

In accordance with the provisions of sections 1 and 2, of the act of Congress approved June 1, 1872, entitled "An act making appropriations for the service of the Post-office Department for the year ending June 30, 1873," which provisions are in the words and figures following, viz.:

SECTION 1. * * * And the Postmaster-General is hereby authorized to contract with the lowest bidder, within three months after the passage of this act, after advertising for proposals for a term of ten years from and after the 1st day of October, 1872, for the conveyance of an additional monthly mail on the route herein, as a compensation not to exceed the sum paid during any year paid under the existing contracts, and upon the same conditions and limitations as are prescribed by existing acts of Congress in reference thereto, and the respective contracts made in pursuance thereof; and the contractors under the provisions of this section shall be required to carry the United States mails during the existence of their contracts, without additional charge, on all the steamers they may run upon said line, or any part of it, or any branch or extension thereof: Provided, That all steam-ships hereafter necessarily used on said line shall be built of iron, with water-tight decks, and shall be built of iron, and with their engines and machinery shall be wholly of American construction, and shall be so constructed as to be readily adapted to the uses of naval service of the United States in case of a national emergency, acceptance the officers by whom they are inspected shall report to the Secretary of the Navy, and the Postmaster-General whether the provisions of this act have been complied with. That in all cases the officers of the ships employed in the service herein provided for shall be citizens of the United States, and the personnel of steamers built wholly or in part by the bounty of the United States, shall be citizens of the United States; and in the employment of seamen preference shall be given to citizens of the United States; and in the employment of officers they may be taken from the list of reserves, and the act of June 28, 1861, and the act of the Government of the United States shall have the right, in case of war, to take for the use of the United States any of the steamers of said line, and in such case pay a reasonable compensation therefor: Provided, The price paid shall in no case exceed the original cost of the vessel so taken, and this provision shall extend to and be applicable to the steamers of the Brazilian line hereinafter provided for."

SEC. 2. That if the contract for the increase of the mail service between San Francisco and China and Japan to a semi-monthly service shall be made with the Pacific Mail Steam-ship Company, it shall be performed in the said Company's ships, or the ships of the Pacific Mail Steam-ship Company, and the pay under such contract shall be paid while the said Company or its successors in interest shall maintain and run the line of steam-ships for the transportation of the mail between San Francisco and China, New-York and San Francisco, across the Isthmus of Panama, by the said Pacific Mail Steam-ship Company, and no longer: Provided, That said requirement shall in all respects be applicable to any contract for the mail service between San Francisco and China and Japan, as well as to the Pacific Mail Steam-ship Company.

PROPOSALS

will be received at the Post-office Department, in the City of Washington, until 3 o'clock P. M., on MONDAY, the 12th day of August, 1872, for conveying the mails of the United States by means of an additional monthly line of first-class American seagoing steam-ships of not less than 4,000 tons register each, and of sufficient number to perform twelve voyages per year, between San Francisco and the port of Hong Kong, (China,) touching at Yokohama, (Japan,) with a regular branch line running in connection with the main line between Yokohama and Shanghai, (China,) to commence from the time herein specified, and to continue for ten years from and after the 1st day of October, 1872.

Each bid should name the time proposed to be occupied in performing the service, and the ports, including stoppages at intermediate ports; and also the length of the stoppages at each of the intermediate ports. Schedules of sailing days, stating the proposed days and hours of departure and arrival, as well as the proposed days and hours of arrival, should also accompany each bid. The departures must be so arranged as to alternate at equal and regular intervals with those of the present monthly line during its continuance, forming a regular semi-monthly service in connection therewith; such schedules, however, to be subject to the approval of the Postmaster-General, who may require alterations by him order, from time to time, as the interests of the postal service may require.

The steam-ships offered for the service must be American built steam-ships of the class and type required conforming to the requirements of the law authorizing the service, and, before acceptance, they will be subject to inspection and survey by an experienced marine engineer to be appointed for that purpose by the Secretary of the Navy.

Proposals must conform in all particulars to the provisions and requirements of the acts of Congress approved Feb. 21, 1871, and June 1, 1872, and sections 4 and 6 of the above-cited act of June 1, 1872, and must be properly guaranteed with satisfactory testimonials that the bidder or bidders and their guarantors are men of property and immediately able to make good their guarantee, or guarantee.

The bidder or bidders must be an American citizen or citizens.

The bidder's name and residence, and the name of each member of the firm, if a firm, with the name of the firm, should be distinctly stated. If made by a corporation the bid must be accompanied by a duly-authenticated copy of the charter or articles of incorporation and a list of officers and directors.

All bids exceeding the sum of five thousand dollars must be accompanied by a certified check or draft, payable to the order of the Postmaster-General, upon some solvent national bank, for a sum not less than five centum of the amount of one year's pay proposed in such bid or bids; such check or draft to be subject to all the conditions and provisions of existing laws in regard to bid bonds.

Any assignment or transfer of an ocean mail contract is expressly forbidden by law. Such assignments or transfers are null and void, and the Postmaster-General is authorized to annul any contract in case of its being under-let or assigned.

Proposals shall be sent under seal to "The Superintendent of Foreign Mails," with the words "Mail Proposals" and the name of the service written on the face of the address, and they should be dispatched in time to be received at this Department on or before 3 o'clock P. M. of Monday, the 12th day of August next, which will be the hour for opening the proposals under this advertisement.

LONG BRANCH RACES.

Last Day of the July Meeting at Monmouth Park.

Milesian Wins the Hurdle Race, Lyttleton the Three-Mile Dash, and Wade Hampton The Sequel Stakes.

The first meeting of the season at Monmouth Park has ended. It will hereafter be noted as the occasion on which two of the finest horses America has produced were for the first time brought together, and at the same time be remembered for the unexpectedly easy victory of the animal which was not the favorite. The management on the whole has been favored with a large amount of success, and the sport afforded the public has been quite up to the average. The last day's programme was marked by no remarkable attraction, but the attendance yesterday nevertheless was respectable. There were three races on the card—a hurdle race for all ages, two miles, for a purse of $600; a dash of three miles, for all ages, purse $1,000; and the Sequel Stakes, for three-year olds, $600, added to a sweepstakes of $50 each. The first of these events was won very handily by Milesian, the second by Lyttleton, and the third by Wade Hampton. Owing to the rain of the night before the track was heavy, and not favorable for making a brilliant time record, though it was expected that Lyttleton would have scored much better than 3:06 in the three-mile dash. The fortunate stables at the meeting are those of John Harper and August Belmont, the former winning four races and the latter three. All of the horses will immediately leave for Saratoga, and speculation is already rife as to the winner of the Saratoga Cup, it being asserted in certain quarters that both Longfellow and Harry Basset will start in the race.

THE HURDLE RACE.

The sport of the day began with a hurdle race of two miles, over eight hurdles, which had the following seven entries, viz.: D. J. Bannatyne's ch. h. Milesian, 5 years, by imp. Mickey Free, out of Cornelian, by Wagner; R. Shea's br. c. Astronomer, 4 years, by Asteroid, out of Miss Carter, by imp. Sovereign; John F. Chamberlin's br. g. Impecunious, 4 years, by Tipperary, out of Lucy Fowler, by imp. Albion; Joseph Donahue's br. h. Blind Tom, 6 years, by Star Davis, out of Margravine, by imp. Margrave; Jas. Thompson's b. m. Lobelia, aged, by imp. Bonnie Scotland, out of Capitola, by Lexington; Coffin & Lawrence's b. g. Jim Tisdale, by Revenue, out of Louisa Jordan, and gr. g. Lochinvar, (formerly Allington) 6 years, by Ulverston, out of Paddy Burns, by Paddy Burns. The speculators were of the opinion that Milesian would capture the purse of $600, and therefore made him the favorite, as a glance at the quotations will show:

Milesian	120	$200	$400	$570
Blind Tom	105	155	150	220
Lobelia	100	100	245	245
Astronomer	60	70	65	65
Impecunious	30	40	45	45
Jim Tisdale	85	115	150	115
Lochinvar
Total	$470	$575	$1,055	$1,275

The hurdles were placed at the beginning of the turn, at the quarter-pole, on the backstretch, near the half-mile pole, and on the homestretch.

THE RACE.

After considerable delay they were sent off, and Lobelia assumed the lead, Milesian second, Blind Tom third, and the others together. When they reached the first hurdle, Lobelia went over first, Milesian second, Impecunious third, Blind Tom fourth. When they went round the turn Milesian rushed past Lobelia and assumed the lead, while Impecunious followed him up and was second, Lobelia third, Blind Tom fourth, Lochinvar fifth, Jim Tisdale sixth and Astronomer seventh. They now reached the second hurdle, at the quarter-pole, and before going over Blind Tom had got up to the second place. They all went over the obstacle beautifully in the following order: Milesian first, Blind Tom second, Impecunious third, Lobelia fourth, Lochinvar fifth, Astronomer sixth, and Jim Tisdale bringing up the rear. As they went down the backstretch, Milesian kept to the front, and made the running, leading Blind Tom a length, he being the same distance in front of Impecunious, who was four lengths ahead of Lochinvar. The third hurdle, near the half-mile pole, was jumped in the same order, except that Astronomer had taken the fifth position away from Lobelia. When they came round the lower turn Astronomer bettered his position, taking the fourth place away from Lochinvar. When they passed the three-quarter pole Milesian was still leading a length, with Blind Tom second, two lengths away from Impecunious, who was five lengths in the van of Astronomer, while Lochinvar was fifth, Lobelia sixth, and Jim Tisdale several lengths behind. They now came up the homestretch, and approached the fourth hurdle, which Milesian took still a length in the lead, with Blind Tom and Impecunious together, Lochinvar next, Astronomer, Lobelia and Jim Tisdale. They were now running on the flat, and Milesian increased his lead to two lengths, and thus passed the stand, while Impecunious was second, a head's length in advance of Blind Tom. When they went to the turn and over the fifth hurdle, their positions remained unchanged, but as they went round the turn, Lobelia left the fourth place and got second, and Astronomer followed up to take third place. Milesian still kept to the front, and went over the sixth obstacle easily, with Lobelia second, Astronomer and Blind Tom on even terms. Going down the backstretch Astronomer left Blind Tom, passed Lobelia and took the second place, but when they neared the seventh hurdle Gaffney tried Blind Tom forward, and passing Lobelia and Astronomer, was soon up to the second place. The hurdle was jumped first by Milesian, Blind Tom second, Astronomer third, Impecunious fourth, Lobelia fifth, Lochinvar sixth, and Jim Tisdale seventh and far behind. On the lower turn Blind Tom closed rapidly on Milesian, who was, however, going under an easy pull. At the three-quarter pole the pair were together, with Astronomer four lengths behind them. The race now up the stretch, was between Milesian and Blind Tom, and they came over the last hurdle simultaneously, and an exciting race ensued to the end of the second. Milesian shot out when nearing the stand, and won the race from Blind Tom by a neck, Astronomer third, Impecunious fourth, Lobelia fifth, Jim Tisdale sixth, and Lochinvar seventh. Time—4:15, a slow race.

SUMMARY.

FIRST RACE—Hurdle race, for all ages; welter weights; two miles; eight hurdles; purse $600; first horse $450, second horse $100, and third horse $50.

Time—4:15.

THE THREE-MILE DASH.

The second race of the day was a dash of three miles, for all ages, purse of $1,000, in which there were but two entries, viz.: John Harper's br. h. Lyttleton, by imp. Lexington, out of Fannie Holton, by Lexington, and H. P. McGrath's b. m. Susan Ann, 5 years, by Lexington, out of Roxanna, by imp. Chesterfield. The betting was heavily in favor of the name little horse and Harper's entry, but Susan Ann ran such a good mile on the previous day that it was thought that she would give Lyttleton a close struggle. She found many backers in the odds offered against her, but she disappointed them and cut a poor figure. The following were the figures in the betting:

Lyttleton	$1,000	$600	$600
Susan Ann	300	420	200
Total	$1,300	$1,020	$800

THE RACE.

The drum tapped, and Lyttleton was off two lengths in front, and immediately opened a gap of six lengths as they went round the lower turn. As they neared the quarter-pole, Susan Ann got a little closer to Lyttleton, and five lengths divided them at that point. As they went down the backstretch, Lyttleton was being pulled, and this allowed Susan Ann to get within three lengths of him, and when they turned in this position all the way round to the homestretch, when Susan Ann got a little nearer, and when they came past the stand for the first mile but two lengths divided them. As they went round the turn for the second time, Lyttleton again opened away, and passed the quarter-pole four lengths in the front of his competitor. As they went down the backstretch, Susan Ann again made an effort to catch her game competitor, and when he reached the half-mile pole she was within three lengths of him, and closed the gap to two lengths at the three-quarter pole. In this way they came up the homestretch and passed the stand for the second time. At the turn Lyttleton went away from the mare again, and was three lengths ahead at the quarter-pole, but going down the backstretch Susan Ann got closer, and they were two lengths apart at the half-mile pole. As they came round the lower turn Susan made a determined effort to catch the fleet little Lyttleton, and was urged by Swinn to go her best. She got her nose at his tail when near the three-quarter pole, but when they came to the homestretch, Lyttleton was allowed his head, and came away and won the race easily by two lengths in the very poor time of 3:06, averaging 1:02 to the mile. The backers of Susan Ann were disgusted with the latter's performance, as they certainly expected her to run the three miles much below six minutes. The following is

SUMMARY.

SECOND RACE—Purse $1,000, for all ages; dash of three miles: first, $600; second horse, $100; third horse, $50.

John Harper's br. h. Lyttleton, 4 years, by imp. Lexington, out of Fannie Holton, by Lexington. Sample 1
H. P. McGrath's b. m. Susan Ann, 5 years, by Lexington, out of Roxanna, by imp. Chesterfield. Swinn 2
Time—3:06.

THE MONMOUTH SEQUEL STAKES.

The concluding race on the day and last of the meeting was the Monmouth Sequel Stakes for three-year olds, two miles, value $600, added to a sweepstakes of $50 each, play or pay, winner of the Jersey Derby Stakes to carry five pounds extra. There were twenty-four entries in the stakes, and five of them sported silk when they were called to face the starter. These were A. Belmont's br. c. Wade Hampton, by imp. Leamington, dam by Alexander Churchill, (Hamburg's dam); John F. Chamberlin's gr. c. Brennus, by Lightning, out of Brenna, by imp. Knight of St. George; ch. c. Whistler, by War Dance, out of sister Nora to Pryor; H. McGrath's b. f. Jury, by Lexington, out of Roxanna, by imp. Chesterfield; and Zeb Ward's b. f. Cynthiana, by Tipperary, dam by imp. Hootin. Grant. The following table shows the betting:

Wade Hampton	$750	$1,100
Wheatley	200	400
Brennus	100	205
Cynthiana	50	145
Total	$1,100	$1,850

THE RACE.

After two false attempts they were sent off close together, Brennus showing the way, Jury second, Cynthiana third, Wheatley fourth, and Wade Hampton fifth. As they went round the turn Cynthiana took the second place from Jury, and then went up to Brennus and took the lead from him. Brennus now fell back to the fourth place, while Wheatley came up and was soon second. At the quarter-pole their positions were as follows: Cynthiana first, a length ahead of Wheatley, with Jury third, Brennus fourth, and Wade Hampton behind, under a strong pull. As they passed down the backstretch, Wade Hampton passed Brennus, taking the fourth position, but they were all close together. When they passed the half-mile pole, Cynthiana was still leading, with Wheatley second, a half length behind. Jury third, lapped with Wheatley. Wade Hampton fourth and Brennus fifth. As they came round the lower turn Wheatley and Jury were side by side, and both of them went up and lapped Cynthiana, while Wade Hampton was half a length behind them, Brennus a length in the rear. As they came up the homestretch Jury shook off Wheatley and Cynthiana, and when they reached the stand she was two lengths in front of Wheatley, Cynthiana third, Wade Hampton fourth and Brennus fifth. When they went round the turn for the second time, Jury was cutting out the work in fine style and was showing the way three lengths in front of the others, who were now running in a bunch. Jury got further away, and when they passed the quarter-pole she was four lengths ahead of Wheatley, with Wade Hampton third, Brennus fourth and Cynthiana in the rear and in trouble. When they went down the backstretch, Wade Hampton made play, and passing Wheatley, was soon running second and closing upon Jury. When they reached the half-mile pole, Jury was leading Wade Hampton but a length, but as they went round the lower turn Hampton was creeping up to the head of Jury, and passed the three-quarter pole on even terms with her. No sooner did they strike the homestretch for home than Jury and all the others got into trouble, and Wade Hampton galloped home the winner of the race with something like twenty lengths to spare, Jury second, ten lengths ahead of Brennus, who was the same distance in front of Wheatley, Cynthiana nowhere. Time—3:55¾.

SUMMARY.

THIRD RACE.—The Monmouth Sequel Stakes, value $600, added to a sweepstakes of $50 each, play or pay, for three-year olds; winner of the Jersey Derby to carry five pounds extra; the second to receive $600, and the third $100 out of the stakes; two miles.

BASE-BALL.

Defeat of the Forest City by the Atlantics—Score 10 to 3.

The Forest City, of Cleveland, suffered another defeat yesterday, their conquerers this time being the Atlantics, of Brooklyn, and the game taking place at the Capitoline. The Forest City went through the game with only eight men, Pratt being ill and Wolters absent for some reason peculiarly his own. In this dilemma Pabor was called on to pitch, the vacancy being made in the outfield. Under these circumstances, a spirited contest could not well be expected, and the game was not very creditable to either party, the Atlantics winning by superiority at the bat, which enabled them at once to take the lead and keep it up sufficiently to win by 10 to 3. On the winning side Barlow, Fergason and Hall were distinguishable for good fielding, Holdsworth and Sweasy bearing off the palm on the other nine. The pitching of both Brelit and Pabor was very wild and irregular, and materially assisted in run getting.

The Grenadier Guards.

The Band of the Grenadier Guards, including the leader, Mr. Dan Godfrey, and Lieut. Col. Fludyer, arrived in this City yesterday morning, by the steamer Bristol, from Boston. They were met at the dock by a body of policemen and a large crowd of citizens, and proceeded to the office of Mr. John G. Dale, the agent of the Inman line, where they were regaled with lunch. Their baggage was taken to the Grand Central Hotel, and the men spent the day in visiting Central Park and other public places in the City. In the evening they dressed in full uniform, with the exception of the bearskin hats, the latter being too warm, and proceeded up Broadway to the Academy of Music, their gay uniform attracting much attention. The men speak very highly of their reception in Boston, and are proud of the cress presented to them by Mr. Gilmore, but they all say that they never saw such hot weather. They will leave for Europe at 2 o'clock today, by the steam-ship City of Antwerp, from Pier No. 45 North River.

Singular Mortality.

On the Fourth, Hugh McGuire, residing at No. 96 North Sixth-street, E. D., attended the funeral of one of his children. On returning home he found that his only remaining child had died during his absence. The anguish of his double bereavement seemed to crush him, and he died in less than two hours. The weight of this affliction has prostrated Mrs. McGuire, and there is but little prospect that she will survive the shock.

SUN-STROKES.

Comparative Mortality During the Past Twenty-Seven Years.

Excess of Mortality in 1872—Terrible Effects of the Heat During the Last Six Days—The Casualties Yesterday.

The first week of July, 1872, will be made memorable in the mortuary annals of New-York for the unprecedented number of deaths from sun-stroke, and a little so for the mortality from sun stroke. Judging from the number of deaths which have taken place in this City during the past six days from prostration by the heat, it is to be feared that before the Summer quarter shall have expired the total number of deaths from this cause will far exceed that of any previous year. Within the present century the death record under this head has been carefully kept, except in the years 1811, 1816, 1825 and 1826—the largest number occurring in the year 1825, when 265 fell victims to the heat. The following shows the mortality from this cause since 1825:

1825	265	1848	6
1826	74	1849	13
1827	14	1850	18
1828	32	1851	42
1829	26	1852	115
1830	21	1853	40
1831	17	1854	14
1832	20	1855	16
1833	8	1856	12
